RAINEY VISIONS DEEPER TAX ON SMALL INCOME

Broadening of Nuisance Levies Only Alternative, He Says.

PROHIBITION REPEAL "BEST BUDGET HOPE"

15 Governors Start Fight to Have More Money Given for Highway Work.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

A deeper tax on small incomes or a broadening of the number of items levied against under existing excise tax laws, were seen yesterday by House Democratic Leader Henry T. Rainey as the only immediate alternatives to a direct manufacturers sales tax at this short session.

Rainey suggested the small income tax, he said, "because the large incomes have mostly vanished." He made it clear he is not sponsoring any such tax, however, conceding "there is likely to be about as much House opposition to it as there is to the sales tax."

The white-maned leader and candidate for Speaker views a broadening of existing excise or nuisance taxes at the next session as a possible avenue of approach to the sales tax, but believes public opinion will have to undergo a decided shift before this becomes possible.

Sees Billion in Liquor.

"There is but one sure way out of our budget-balancing troubles at the next session and that way is repeal of the eighteenth amendment," he said. "It would bring in nearly $1,000,000,000 in revenues."

Democratic leaders, Rainey included, believe there is virtually no possibility now of a sales tax this session, especially in view of President-elect Roosevelt's reported stand against it. And the House ways and means committee probably will not be brought together to consider the question of new revenues until next Thursday.

Meantime, leaders are stumped, whether they concede it or not. Speaker Garner reiterated he "would like to see the budget balanced." Ways and Means Chairman Collier suggested the McKeown plan to levy a privilege or license tax of 1 per cent on interstate business yielding $600,000,000 annually. Rainey frankly admitted chances for a revenue bill of any kind this session are slim.

New Threat Appears.

A prospective yield of $150,000,000 on the beer bill now pending in the Senate, and extraordinary efforts of the House appropriations committee to effect appropriations cuts up to $800,000,000, still would fall short of budget-balancing needs.

A new threat appeared yesterday in the path of the appropriation slashing program. In the $110,981,000 Agriculture bill now before the House, the committee reduced the Federal aid for State roads item to $35,000,000. Governors from fifteen States

Salvador Deserts Friendship Treaty

Joins Costa Rica in Renunciation of Pact Signed Here 10 Years Ago.

San Salvador, Republic of El Salvador, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—The government issued a decree today renouncing the Central American Treaty of peace and friendship signed at Washington in 1923, under which the signatories agreed not to recognize any government coming into power by revolution.

This provision of the agreement has resulted in refusal by the United States and some other countries to recognize President Martinez of El Salvador, who overthrew the Aurojo regime in 1931, but was subsequently constitutionally elected.

Costa Rica renounced the Central American Treaty last month on the ground that it had produced embarrassing situations and had failed to achieve the expected results. Other signatories are Guatemala, Honduras and Nicharagua.

Mary Pickford Is Hurt As Studio Lamp Falls

Los Angeles, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Mary Pickford, motion picture actress, was knocked unconscious when a heavy studio lamp fell upon her today.

Douglas Fairbanks, her husband, lifted the lamp from her as she lay prostrate. A physician was summoned to revive her. Miss Pickford later resumed her role and it was announced she was not seriously hurt.

East Calling

Nippon Research Institute May Invite Hoover to Come There.

Tokyo (Thursday), Dec. 29 (U.P.).—The Japanese Institute of Research and National Economy is considering inviting President Hoover to visit Japan and advise this nation in economic reorganization, it was understood today. Chikuhei Nakajima, member of the Japanese Parliament, is head of the institute.

If directors of the institute approve the plan, its agents will visit the United States after Mr. Hoover retires as President and invite him to undertake the work, it was understood.

Governmental leaders favor such a plan, believing it would improve Japanese-American relations.

BREWER PROFIT TAX PROPOSED BY BORAH

Senate Committee Quorum Still Lacking, Action Off Until Next Week.

(Associated Press.)

An excess profits tax on brewers was proposed by Senator Borah, Idaho, Republican, yesterday as action on the House 3.2 per cent beer bill was delayed until next week by lack of a quorum in the Senate judiciary committee.

Borah announced he was preparing an amendment to the House bill to levy such a tax so that if the measure is enacted it will bring more revenue into the Treasury. He emphasized, however, that his opposition to the beer bill had not diminished. He has denounced the measure as "nullification of the Constitution."

Secretary Mills estimated before the House ways and means committee that the proposed tax of $5 a barrel would produce from $125,000,000 to $150,000,000 a year, but sponsors of the legislation said these estimates were too low.

Borah has not decided what rate level he will propose, nor how much can be raised, but he asserted that if beer is legalized "both ends of the beer business" should contribute to meeting the Treasury deficit.

He quoted brewers as testifying before the House committee that the $5 a barrel tax could be passed on to the consumers and that the prospectuses being issued by the beer companies indicated they expected to make huge profits.

Despite the failure of the judiciary committee to act yesterday on the beer measure, members of the group predicted swift consideration next week. Chairman Norris called another meeting of the committee for Monday.

Senator Blaine, Wisconsin Republican, who has announced a proposal for redrafting the House bill to repeal the one-half of 1 per cent

2 Lindbergh Suspects Exonerated by Jafsie

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Two more suspects in the Lindbergh kidnaping investigation were added today to the long list of those absolved of any connection with the crime when neither was identified by Dr. John F. Condon, Bronx professor, who gained fame as the "Jafsie" of ransom negotiations.

Dr. Condon came to the Montgomery Street Police Station this afternoon. There he scanned two line-ups and failed to recognize any one who looked like the man to whom he gave $50,000 in the hope of gaining the return of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr. Later, Hollister Deino, of Staten Island, and John ("Lucky") Miller, of Jersey City, were released.

Wabash Flier Hits Tank Car; 2 Killed

Officials State That Fast Train Was Derailed by Vandals.

Jacksonville, Ill., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Two men were fatally injured, two others hurt, and several passengers were shaken severely in the wreck of a Wabash passenger train just inside the city limits here tonight. Railroad officials said they had evidence that vandals caused the wreck by tampering with a switch.

The engine crashed into an oil tank car on the switch, overturning and toppling one coach of the seven-car train with it. The oil burst into flames.

Investigation, officials said, indicated some one had filed open a lock on the switch, removed the red danger signal, and thrown the switch open. The train veered from the main line onto the siding, smashing the oil car. The fluid sprayed over the engine. Five pieces of fire equipment were rushed to the scene and soon brought the flames under control.

GOV. ROOSEVELT SOON TO STUDY REVENUE NEEDS

Won't Commit Himself on Policy Until His Term Ends Saturday.

PLANNING TO MEET GARNER NEXT WEEK

Is Confused by Conflicting Reports on Deficit, Advisers Say.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 28 (A.P.). President-elect Roosevelt will seek first-hand informaton on the Nation's financial situation, it became known today, before committing himself to any tax policy in connection with the problem of balancing the Federal budget.

The gathering of this information will be one of the first tasks to which Mr. Roosevelt will set himself after his term as governor ends next Saturday, his friends indicated today.

In this connection he was preparing for a conference with Vice President-elect John N. Garner, Speaker of the House and leader of the Democratic majority there, either at his Hyde Park estate or his New York City home some day next week.

Confused by Reports.

Mr. Roosevelt was unwilling to say whether he believed the Federal budget can be balanced during the present short session of Congress by additional economies and a selective sales tax. His advisers attributed his hesitancy on this point to his unwillingness to accept any of the reports from Washington regarding the amount of the national deficit. They said he has been somewhat confused by conflicting reports from several sources placing the national deficit at anywhere from $400,000,00 to $1,000,000,000.

Mr. Roosevelt declined to elaborate on yesterday's statement from the executive offices that he was "horrified" at reports he had given his approval to a general manufacturers' sales tax plan proposed in Congress. His friends said he feels that in studying the budget-balancing problem he will have "nothing to work on" until he gets the first-hand information he intends to seek.

Backs Conference Plan.

Today the President-elect gave his approval to a plan proposed by the American Legislators Association, with headquarters in Chicago, for an interstate conference of legislators at Washington February 3, "to secure a better coordination of the revenue systems of the Federal Government and of the 48 States."

In a letter to Henry Toll, representing the association, he called its proposal "a splendid idea."

House May Pass Filipino Bill Today

Agreement on 10-Year Program Submitted by Chairman Hare.

(Associated Press.)

House leaders plan to lay the long-disputed issue of Philippine independence on the White House doorstep by tonight. The agreement on a ten-year independence program, already approved by the Senate, was submitted to the House yesterday by Chairman Hare, of the insular affairs committee.

Debate today will be limited to one hour. Representative Rainey, the Democratic leader, said the huge majority by which the bill was passed last session made approval of the conference report virtually certain. Representative Snell, the Republican leader, said he also expected the House to send the bill to President Hoover.

Besides granting independence in ten years if the Filipinos ratify a constitution to be framed in an island convention, the bill would limit shipments of sugar and coconut oil into the United States pending freedom.

Ice Blocks Rio Grande Second Time in History

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—For the second time in history the Rio Grande was blocked by an ice jam today and was threatening to change its course at San Marcial, N. Mex., 185 miles north of here.

A telegram received by L. M. Lawson, international boundary commissioner, said water spilling over the levees was threatening to flood several hundred acres of farm land in the Valverd, N. Mex., district, opposite San Marcial. In the event of a flood property damage probably would not be large because of the small amount of water in the river.

Air Nuptials

Capital Girl Bride in Double Wedding in Plane Over Caribbean.

The first couple were Miss Elma Margaret Ellsworth, daughter of Capt. Harry Ellsworth, U. S. M. C., of Washington, D. C., and Eugene D. Pawley, of Port au Prince.

The second couple were Miss Jeannette E. Burrell and Charles Elmer Patterson, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Louise Haag, of Radford, Va., was matron of honor; Edwin Martin, of Boston, best man, and the Rev. A. F. Parkinson Turnbull, of Port au Prince, performed the ceremony.

2 DIE IN GUN FIGHT AT DOORS OF PALACE

Bomb Is Also Thrown Near Where Bulgarian King Is Conferring.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—A gun battle today in front of the royal palace, where King Boris was conferring with political leaders about the cabinet crisis, resulted in the deaths of a policeman and an employe of the war ministry. Eight persons were injured, two of them seriously. A bomb thrown failed to explode.

The press and public expressed indignation over the incident, one of a long series in which rival Macedonian factions have participated. Neither of the men killed was a combatant.

The authorities said the battle apparently had no connection with the resignation of Premier Muschanoff, which was submitted shortly before it started.

Two men, believed to be members of the Protogerovist faction, opened fire on the editor of the newspaper Macedonia and his bodyguard, the police said, and they returned the fire. The editor was wounded. One of the assailants was captured after throwing a bomb at the police.

The attacking party warded off suspicion by dressing as hunters and by having dogs with them. They carried rifles as well as pistols and bombs.

For several years Bulgarian politics has been disturbed by a strong movement for Macedonian autonomy. From strongholds in the Bulgarian mountains the Macedonians have made frequent raids into the territory of Bulgaria's neighbors, thus helping to create a state of discord.

Holdup Man Takes Candy Store's $80

Robber Brushes Shoulders With Policeman at Fannie May Shop.

A bold robber, wafting his chance, last night slipped into the Fannie May candy store at 1010 E street northwest just as a policeman walked out, and at the point of a pistol forced attendants to surrender the contents of a cash register.

The intruder brushed shoulders with Sergt. J. D. Harrington, of the Traffic Bureau, as the two met in the doorway.

Without a word he covered two clerks, Miss Lillian Jones and Mrs. Lillian Reynolds, with a gun. As the women, hesitated, he spoke two curts words:

"Gimme cash!"

Refusing change, he obtained about $80 in bills and made his escape.

GRAND JURORS GIVE AUDIENCE TO MRS. JUDD

PRISONER SECRETLY SPEEDED FROM CELL

Invited to Return After She Says She Has but Half Completed Story.

Phoenix, Ariz., Dec. 28 (A.P.). Winnie Ruth Judd, condemned to die February 17 for the slaying of Agnes Anne Leroi, regarding which she repeatedly has said the "whole truth" never has been told, was given a chance to talk today by the Maricopa County grand jury behind closed doors. What she related, if anything, in connection with the "trunk murders" of Mrs. Leroi and Hedvig Samuelson remained a secret.

While Mrs. Judd's unexpected appearance before the inquisitorial body followed recently renewed threats of both herself and her husband, Dr. William C. Judd, to "tell all," the initiative in today's move was taken by the grand jury itself.

Secrecy Shrouds Move.

Mrs. Judd was brought here from the State prison at Florence in response to a subpena. Officials said she was not informed of the purpose of the trip until she was well on her way to Phoenix by automobile. Immediately after her testimony was concluded she started a 67-mile trip by motor car back to the Arizona State Prison at Florence.

So secret was the grand jury action that Dr. Judd, who has been living in Phoenix since he was dropped recently from the patients' roll of the United States Veterans Hospital at Fort Whipple, near Prescott, Ariz., went to Florence to visit her today, arriving after she had left under guard of Sheriff J. R. McFadden.

Voice Comes Through Doors.

For an hour and a half she remained in the grand jury room. Occasionally her strident voice was heard beyond the heavy oak doors in the courthouse corridors, although the words were unintelligible.

At the midday recess she appeared surrounded by her guards.

"Are you ready to go back to Florence with us now?" a guard asked as she was led away to the office of Sheriff McFadden.

"No," she replied. "I am not half through. I haven't had half a chance to tell my story. I'm going back. They told me to come back and talk as long as I felt like it."

Senate Group to Press Insull Debacle Inquiry

(Associated Press.)

Chairman Norbeck of the Senate banking committee yesterday said his group would continue its inquiry into the Insull crash regardless of the Greek refusal to extradite Samuel Insull to the United States. He added that if Greece's action had any effect at all, it would "make us push the investigation harder."

For weeks the committee has had agents at work in Chicago looking into the Insull Utilities collapse, but the question of open hearings here has been left for future determination.

Bankruptcy Referee Asks Ouster of Gang-Ridden Aid

Los Angeles Official Says Trustee Has Admitted Paying $50 Per Week to Cleaning Racketeers; Wholesale Deportations United States' Goal.

Los Angeles, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Rupert B. Turnbull, United States referee in bankruptcy, today recommended removal of Leonard Brown, trustee in bankruptcy for the United Cleaners and Dyers here, with the assertion Brown admitted he had been paying $50 weekly "dues" to an organization which threatened to blow up the concern's plant.

The recommendation for Brown's removal was filed with the Federal courts after a series of hearings at which, according to Turnbull, witnesses appeared with armed guards.

"Gangsters must come to know," the referee said, "that it is not necessary to pay tribute to any one in an endeavor to enforce the decrees of the United States court."

The order said a meeting of creditors of the United Cleaners and Dyers would be called soon to name a new trustee.

"In the instant case," Turnbull said, "I find that one of my trustees in bankruptcy has, without the knowledge of the court, been yielding to the demands of an organization known as the Cleaners & Dyers Association. * * * He now expressly admits, under my direct questioning from the witness stand, that this money was not paid for 'dues' but for protection."

Brown intimated he may contest the removal order.

"I feel," he said, "that I am the victim of a conspiracy of racketeers in the cleaning and dyeing business. I have been in constant fear of my life."

The Los Angeles Times said tonight R. P. Clark, supervisor of the Immigration Service, from Washington, D. C., and a corps of 25 special investigators had been engaged for a month here in an inquiry into the citizenship status of known hoodlums, the eventual plan being wholesale deportations.

$10 Tobacco Causes Arrest of 'Romanoff'

Elusive "Prince" Is Collared as He Leaves Shop in New York.

New York, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—The favorite pipe tobacco of "Prince Michael Romanoff," which costs $10 a pound, proved his undoing again today.

The self-labeled "prince," who is just plain Harry F. Gerguson to the immigration authorities whenever they can catch him, sauntered into a Fifth avenue tobacconist's and asked for the blend and a pipe.

A report that he had sauntered down the gangplank of the Europa unnoticed behind Marilyn Miller last week was responsible for a city-wide alarm for the "prince," who is known to authorities as an irrepressible imposter.

Possibly to elude them, Gerguson had shaved his little black mustache and donned horn-rimmed spectacles. However, he failed to escape recognition by Eugene Barry, the clerk who sold him his special mixture.

As Gerguson strolled out Barry ran to the street and pointed him out to two traffic policemen. They started after him. Gerguson looked over his shoulder, saw them coming and increased his pace. The policemen broke into a run. Gerguson, maintaining his dignity, just walked a little faster. The policemen collared him.

HARRY GERGUSON.

He was taken to a police station, where an immigration inspector called for him an hour later. From there he went to the Federal detention prison, then by automobile to a pier, whence a police launch took him to Ellis Island and obscurity at least temporarily, for communication with the island ends at nightfall.

Gerguson was as debonair as ever. "Ah, here we are again," he said to some persons he recognized. "Let me

FRENCH TRADE PACT IS SIGNED AT BERLIN

Restriction of Most Favored Nation Treatment Provided in Agreement.

Paris, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Restriction of the most favored nation treatment, which has played an important part in Franco-American negotiations for a commercial treaty, was provided for in a new Franco-German accord signed tonight in Berlin. Announcement of the agreement was made by the foreign office here.

It was said by a person high in governmental circles that the new limitation was expected to facilitate negotiations in Congress with other countries establishing the principle that the most-favored-nation clause will no longer be accorded unreservedly.

The new Franco-German agreements also permits each country to recover tariff freedom on due notice. Individual tariff rates, it was explained, can be changed by either country after a warning to that effect of 15 days.

On the other hand, the most-favored-nation clause is restricted to most goods exchanged between France and Germany, but does not apply to others or to facilities that France grants to central European countries under the Stresa agreements.

By a previous arrangement signed December 24, a special bureau will be set up in Paris to facilitate payment in marks for French goods. In this way France hopes to increase her exports to Germany by 70 per cent.

Bandits Cow 8 in Bank And Flee With $4,000

Gloucester, N. J., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Five robbers held up four employes, three customers and a tear gas salesman in a branch bank of the Camden Safe Deposit & Trust Co. in Gloucester today and escaped with cash estimated at $4,000.

Forcing the four employes and the salesman into a vault, and ordering the customers to lie on the floor, the robbers took several packages of bills from the vault and the cashier's cage, put them in paper bags and then fled. The holdup took less than 10 minutes.

West Virginia Man Held in Hotel Fire

Pittsburgh, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—One guest was asphyxiated, another was seared by flames and three firemen were injured today when fire broke out in the Seventh Avenue Hotel in downtown Pittsburgh. About 150 men, women and children in various stages of undress escaped to the street.

The asphyxiation victim was found dead in a corridor on the fifth floor. His body was burned almost beyond recognition. He was about 60 years old.

Frank Reed, of Fairmont, W. Va., a guest, was burned about the shoulders in reaching the street. Reed was arrested in a hospital, charged with being a suspicious person. Detectives say the fire started in his room while he was in the lobby.

ECONOMY PROGRAM VIRTUALLY DRAFTED

Only Two Minor Phases Yet to Be Decided by Special Group in Senate.

The Senate economy committee has completed drafting its Federal retrenchment program on all except two minor phases, Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, a member of the bipartisan economy body, disclosed yesterday.

He said the committee will have one more meeting, possibly tomorrow, before the plan is reported to the full appropriations committee, after New Year's. Bound by the committee's secrecy rule, Senator Byrnes declined to say what the committee's program provides. The committee is awaiting a report from the budget director of some unimportant items, he said.

Federal employes have a vital interest in the committee's report in that Government pay policies formulated by the House in the Treasury-Postoffice bill have been referred to the bipartisan economy group in the Senate for study.

The committee, under chairmanship of Senator Bingham (Republican), Connecticut, has the alternative of continuing the 8½ per cent furlough pay cut, as proposed by the House, substituting a flat cut, or adding a pay cut over and above the furlough.

Representative Snell, New York, House Republican leader, in seeking a 50 per cent cut yesterday in a $39,000 Agriculture Department research investigation appropriation, charged in this and other items the 8½ per cent cut dealt Federal workers was the only reduction made in the bill by the appropriations committee.

Mr. Snell, however, was attacked by Representative LaGuardia (Republican), New York, who charged he was putting "science into politics." Mr. LaGuardia offered an amendment to cut the appropriation 50 cents, "so my distinguished leader can rest easy." The amendment was voted down.

Cemetery Is in Center Of Canadian Gold Rush

Victoria, British Columbia, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—A cemetery and the land upon which the Barkerville mining office stands is staked out in a gold rush reported today between Cottonwood and Barkerville, in the Cariboo District of British Columbia. More than 150 claims have been located in three weeks.

J. P. Snarlett, gold commissioner, of Barkerville, messaged that his supply of recording papers had been depleted and that he must have 1,500 more. The stakings have been mostly quartz, he said.

Three Women Burned To Death at Poor Farm

Stanwood, Mich., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Three elderly women inmates were burned to death, a dozen persons received minor burns and cuts, and 30 more fled to safety today when fire destroyed the Mecosta County poor farm home near here.

The dead were identified tentatively was Lela Wilson, Rosetta Smith and Emma Waldon. Attendants at the poor farm who carried many of the inmates to safety were unable to reach them on the second floor before the fire swept the entire building. Of the 45 inmates, at least a dozen received minor injuries.

KIN HELP POLICE HUNT GRAVE OF 'SLAIN' LAWYER

Letter Declares Body of Missing Man Buried Near Hagerstown.

CAR CHECKED IN OHIO FOR POSSIBLE CLEWS

"Boy in Distress" States He Was Innocent Party to Framed Slaying.

Henderson, N. C., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Investigation in the case of R. S. McCoin, missing Henderson attorney, took two definite turns today, for while Ohio police checked his automobile for clews to possible attackers, relatives turned out to help Maryland authorities hunt a grave where McCoin was said in an anonymous letter to have been buried.

The letter was written by one signing himself "a boy in distress," who said he was an innocent member of a party of four that killed McCoin after McCoin refused to pay "$15 damage" done their car, burned his clothes and then buried him near Hagerstown, Md.

At great length the letter set forth that the quartet needed funds, decided to sidewipe the first person they saw driving alone, and demand damages to gain money for food and gasoline.

Masonic Pin Clew.

The writer said he had been forced to sign a paper admiting the killing, but he said one of the other three was guilty.

Meanwhile, Virginia officials checked all known angles of the case in the State, for McCoin was last seen after visiting a Richmond, Va., filling station and asking the way to Lynchburg and Farmville. He had left his home here a short time before to visit his 1,600-acre farm at DeWitt, Va.

At Columbus, Ohio, where McCoin's automobile was found after it had been left late last week by an unidentified person at a garage, police examined fingerprints and checked a red-stained glove, a billfold and a pair of spectacles found in the machine. An effort was being made to determine whether the substance on the glove was human blood.

Near Hagerstown, Md., M. A. and L. S. Sitton, nephews of McCoin, a member of the North Carolina Advisory Budget Commission, joined in a search for his body and ashes of his burned clothes. They left Richmond earlier today and pointed out that, if the ashes were found, McCoin's Masonic pin probably would be found also, thus aiding in the identification.

Rains Hamper Work.

Heavy rains hampered work near Hagerstown and Sheriff Bruce Downin reported a fruitless search, but he said he would resume the search later today.

In the letter, addressed to the "Chief Judge of the North Carolina Supreme Court," at Raleigh, the writer said he met three men whom he knew only as "Jumbo," "Slim" and "Shorty," in Jacksonville, Fla. These three had an automobile, he said, and needed money to get North. The writer said he furnished $6 for food and gasoline, but that they ran out of money near Petersburg, Va. He said they broke into two filling stations. Then they decided they would crash into the next motorist driving alone and demand damages.

Between Petersburg and Richmond, the writer said, "Jumbo" was driving and he ran into the next car he met. The driver protested the demand for $15 and "Shorty ran up and hit the

MEMBERS IN CLASH ON BUREAU MERGER

Mapes Warns Sidetracking Hoover Program Will End Saving Moves.

Tension over proposed side-tracking of the President's Government reorganization program flared up yesterday in a clash between House Expenditures Chairman John J. Cochran and Representative Mapes (Republican), Michigan, during House debate on the agriculture supply bill.

Mapes warned House members that disapproval of the proposed 58 Federal Bureau regroupings "will mean that no action will ever be taken toward Government reorganization."

Challenging Mapes' statement, Representative Cochran cited testimony of Budget Director J. Clawson Roop to the effect that it would be better to let Government reorganization go over to the incoming administration. He pointed out that the President's plan contained no estimate of economies contemplated.

Cochran Offers Proof.

Aroused when Mapes questioned Roop had ever made such a statement, Cochran offered to show the Michigan member a printers' proof of the hearings.

Mapes declared the country had clamored for Government reorganization for years, that President Hoover had worked out his program only after a thoroughgoing survey, and that it would be impossible for any man to estimate the savings from such a plan.

Joining in the discussion were Representatives Eaton (Republican), Colorado; Colton (Republican), Utah; Carter (Democrat), Wyoming, and Schafer (Republican), Wisconsin. Eaton opposed the proposed shift of the present General Land Office setup. Carter questioned economies under the President's plan. Colton charged insufficient hearings before the expenditures committee.

Bankhead Objects.

Representative Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, put an end to the debate when he objected to "irrelevant" matter being considered during agriculture supply bill time.

Mapes' answer to individual criticism of the President's program was that no reorganization program ever devised would please the personal fancies of all House members.

Later Cochran said he would seek committee action on this blanket resolution of disapproval as soon as he can get a quorum of his committee together. He said he favors reorganization of Government bureaus under President-elect Roosevelt's guidance.

INCOME TAX CHANGE VISIONED BY RAINEY

have wired House leaders they will seek inclusion of $128,000,000 more when the roads items is reached in the Agriculture bill.

On the Senate side of the Capitol yesterday, Senator Dill (Democrat), Washington, interpreted Roosevelt's reported expression against the sales tax as laying emphasis on Government retrenchment as opposed to further taxation.

First Big Disappointment.

On the House side, Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, sales tax foe, said Gov. Roosevelt has "saved the day." In disapproving the sales tax, he said the President-elect "certainly pulled some of our leaders out of a blind alley."

Representative Britten, Illinois, and Representative Treadway, Massachusetts (Republicans), criticized the Democratic position in prepared statements. Britten said Roosevelt's stand gave the American people their "first great disappointment over election of a Democratic President." Treadway charged the Democrats had made only a gesture by passing "a beer bill on the misrepresentation that it is a revenue measure."

In arguing the improbability of any sales tax bill getting through either this or the next session of Congress, Democratic Leader Rainey yesterday cited figures showing that 125 Democrats and 55 Republicans, who voted against the sales tax at the last session were reelected to the Seventy-third Congress. He pointed out there are thus 180 certain votes against the sales tax. Only 38 additional would be necessary to give an opposition majority.

The writer said the man died in a short while and they burned his clothes and then buried the body.

Then they went on to Chicago after, the writer said, the slain man's car was left in Columbus. In Chicago, the writer of the letter said, the other three locked him in a room and he never saw them again.

He said later "an old man" came and made him sign a paper saying he had accidentally killed the motorist. The writer said he complied, that he was given $20 and was released. He said he was mailing the letter "10 minutes before leaving Chicago" for his home.

Murder Theory Discounted.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Investigations conducted by Virginia police in the disappearance of R. S. McCoin, Henderson, N. C., attorney, do not support a murder theory, T. MacCall Frazier, director of the Virginia motor vehicle division, said tonight.

He said that although "We can not say McCoin was not murdered, we doubt it occurred in the manner described, if it occurred at all."

Even though a murder may have been committed, he continued, "we have grave doubts that the murder was committed in Virginia, which is the question with which we are chiefly concerned."

Maryland Joins Hunt.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Maryland State police late today joined the hunt for the body of R. S. McCoin, of Henderson, N. C., alleged to have been buried in an unmarked grave near here.

The assignment of the State police was made after the Governor of North Carolina requested Gov. Albert C. Ritchie to press the search for the body in Washington County.

Sheriff Bruce Dowain and State police tomorrow expect to visit the proprietors of the inns and tourist houses along the highway in an effort to learn if any of them had seen the automobile as described in the letter.

Roads' Need Greater Now Than Year Ago, I. C. C. Told

Willard and Other Officials Disclose Plight of Carriers at Hearing on Request for Continuance of Freight Surcharges Indefinitely..

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Presenting a complete picture of railroad finances after three years of steadily declining car loadings, spokesmen for the principal carriers yesterday made an urgent appeal before the Interstate Commerce Commission for indefinite extension of the emergency freight surcharges authorized a year ago.

"Whatever the needs were a year ago, they are very much greater today," said Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio System, in concluding the presentation of the carriers' testimony.

Earlier testimony had suggested that a number of important carriers who are weathering the financial stresses of the current year might not have come through without the added revenues provided by the surcharges.

Rates Yielded $52,000,000.

As applied by the 162 Class I carriers during the first ten months of 1932, the emergency rates yielded only 2.6 per cent of the gross freight revenues, but this extra income of approximately $52,000,000 was slightly more than 20 per cent of the combined net railway operating income for the period.

During the first nine months of this year 122 roads, comprising 77.6 per cent of the total Class I mileage, did not earn fixed charges. Without the emergency revenues six other important systems would have fallen into the deficit group. Had the surcharges been denied all roads this year 82.9 per cent of the Class I mileage would have failed to cover charges.

Competition of Truck.

Paul Shoup, vice chairman of the Southern Pacific System, denied that the higher rates, which apply almost entirely to nonagricultural products, had caused any decline in railroad traffic during the last year. He agreed with Mr. Willard that unregulated truck competition had forced rate reduction in many sections, but held that such adjustments probably would have been enforced regardless of the I. C. C.'s surcharge authorization. In no case, he insisted, had the traffic been diverted from railroads to trucks by the increased rates.

The carriers are seeking to continue the emergency revenues without the pooling plan required by the commission this year to fund the extra income in the Railroad Credit Corporation for loans to the weaker roads. Some members of the commission favor continuance of the pooling scheme.

After completion of the railroad's case yesterday, Chairman Meyer announced the record would be held open until January 15, after which it will be determined whether additional hearings are necessary. No opponents of the extension have asked to be heard, the principal shippers' associations having determined in advance not to resist the carriers' plea.

Why Pooling Plan Failed.

In indorsing the railroad plea for abandonment of the pooling arrangement, Mr. Willard told the commission that the failure of the surcharges to produce the estimated revenue of $100,000,000 to $125,000,000 a year made the pool ineffective. As originally devised, the witness continued, the pool was to carry the surcharge earnings of the stronger roads, but under the actual experience of the past year even the most powerful systems require the surcharges to cover their own obligations. He explained that the B. & O. surplus of $3,500,000 in 1931 had dwindled to a prospective operating deficit of $6,500,000 for 1932.

"Take out the surcharge income of $3,500,000 this year, and this deficit would have been $10,000,000," he added.

$200,000,000 Deficit.

Julius H. Parmelee, director of the Bureau of Railway Economics, an affiliate of the Association of Railway Executives, estimated that for 1932 the Class I roads would show a combined deficit of approximately $200,000,000.

"After deducting the revenues from the emergency rates, there were 128 roads in the 'red' during the first nine months of 1932," Parmelee said. "They showed a total net deficit of $265,000,000. These 128 roads operate 82.9 per cent of the total mileage of the Class I carriers and large switching and terminal companies. Only 30 Class I railroads who participate in the pooling plan earned a net income in excess of their fixed charges for the first nine months of 1932."

CAPT. STEELE, U.S.S. SARATOGA, TO RETIRE

Was Chief of Los Angeles; Will Be Succeeded by Capt. Zogbaum.

(Associated Press.)

Capt. George W. Steele, commanding officer of the aircraft carrier Saratoga, now at San Pedro, Calif., will be placed on the retired list January 1 at his own request.

The Navy Department in making this announcement yesterday said the command of the Saratoga will be taken over by Capt. Rufus F. Zogbaum, jr., commandant of the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Fla.

Capt. Steele, whose home is at Marion, Ind., has completed 30 years' service in the Navy. He was made a lieutenant commander in 1912 and was appointed captain in 1921.

One of Capt. Steele's outstanding assignments was as commander of the ZR-3, built by the Germans at Friedrichshafen and later christened the Los Angeles. He made the flight to the United States in the Zeppelin in 1923, and later, in addition to his regular duty as commanding officer of the Los Angeles, Capt. Steele commanded the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst.

The Navy Department announcement yesterday said "it was largely through his foresight, organization and administration that this station has attained its present state of efficiency."

As commander of a transport during the World War he was awarded the Navy Cross.

Capt. Zogbaum has been in command of the Pensacola station since June, 1931. Prior to that date he commanded the Langley and the Wright, aircraft carriers. During the war he commanded the destroyer Stevens and patroled approaches to Europe against enemy submarines.

DAVIS' HOPES HIGH FOR TRADE PARLEY

Feels Bringing Together of Nations Will Help Much; To See Stimson.

New York, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Norman H. Davis, former Undersecretary of State and a delegate to the Geneva disarmament conference, today said in an informal discussion with newspapermen that he looks for good results to grow out of the forthcoming London economic conference and also from the disarmament conference.

Mr. Davis was in New York today, following his visit this week to Albany, where he conferred with President-elect Roosevelt. He said the world at large appeared more and more to be realizing that only by cooperating can it arrest the present depression, which has steadily been drying up international trade.

The former Undersecretary, who has conferred with representatives of many nations in a number of European cities, said the greatest need of the world today was to bring the different nations together. Future solution of world problems, he indicated, would be accomplished largely by getting together without fanfare and without overemphasis placed on technical questions of approach or diplomatic nicety.

To Confer With Stimson.

Mr. Davis was expected to confer within the next 24 hours with Secretary of State Stimson, who was reported ready to leave Washington for New York today. He also conferred today with Edmund E. Day and Prof. John H. Williams, who will represent the United States as technical experts in the meetings to be held preliminary to the economic conference These preparatory meetings will be in Geneva, starting January 9. The main conference will be held later in London, probably by late spring or next summer.

In answer to a question, Davis listed the London economic conference, the disarmament conference, and possibly later meetings with respect to war debts as probably the three most important avenues through which restoration of world prosperity can be reached.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Stimson arranged to leave yesterday for New York for a two-day stay during which he probably will have another talk with Norman H. Davis, American delegate to the disarmament conference, on war debts, economic matters and disarmament.

Movie Theater Patrons Flee as Film Flares Up

Twoscore motion picture fans precipitated themselves hurriedly from the Empress Theater at 419 Ninth street last night when the picture suddenly stopped and the reflection of flames was thrown on the screen to the accompaniment of acrid smoke issuing from the projection room. No one was hurt.

A fire alarm was sent in and a few minutes after the apparatus arrived the flaming celluloid was extinguished.

INCOME TAX REFUND TOTALS $80,583,564

Money Returned to Individuals and Corporations Tops 1931 Amount.

(Associated Press.)

Because even the Government admits it makes mistakes, thousands of individuals and business organizations throughout the country got $80,583,564 from the Federal Treasury last year.

That amount, Secretary Mills told Congress yesterday, represented refunds made in the 1932 fiscal year to taxpayers who through some error had paid too much tax money in that year or in years previous.

As usual, scores of the well and lesser known were on the list naming those to whom more than $500 went. The total of $80,583,564 was higher than the 1931 fiscal year's $69,476,930. The increase was due, in considerable measure, to a Supreme Court decision in May, 1931, holding that the Federal Government could not tax the incomes of incompetent Oklahoma Indians from oil-land rights.

Many Indians Recover.

Because of that decision, thousands of Osage Indians swelled the total of Oklahoma's refunds from its usual two or three hundred to 1,400. Again, too, there were several refunds of more than a million dollars, the largest being $2,960,000 to the United Fruit Co. of Boston.

Next were the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Co., of Pennsylvania, with $2,189,000; the Botany Worsted Mills, of Passaic, N. J., with $1,466,000; the National Aniline & Chemical Corporation of New York City, with $1,455,000; the Reading Co. of Philadelphia, operators of the Reading Railway Lines, with $1,288,000, and the United States Cartridge Co. of New York, with $1,221,000.

Among the better-known individuals were Mrs. Helena S. Raskob, wife of the former chairman of the Democratic national committee, who got $4,095; former Senator Henry J. Allen, of Kansas, with $2,488; Roy D. Chapin, Secretary of Commerce, with $3,746; J. Henry Roraback, Republican national committeeman for Connecticut, with $10,167, and Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh, with $1,676.

Movies Well Represented.

The estate of Lilly Busch, of the beer-making family, got $416,626; that of William duPont, $304,526; that of William K. Vanderbilt, $475,745.

The movie industry again was represented, Douglas Fairbanks drawing back $72,186; Ramon Novarro, $7,604; Conrad Nagel, $4,398; Louis B. Mayer, $1,872, and Charles Rogers, Irene Rich, Mrs. Adolphe Menjou and Mrs. Ernst Lubitsch lesser amounts. Milton Sills' estate was awarded $6,471 and Gloria Caruso, daughter of the tenor, through her mother got $37,097.

Man Seized With Guns Is Held for Grand Jury

Carrying three revolvers and four shotguns, Emmett Calley, alias James Rogers, ran afoul the law Christmas Day when Traffic Policeman Anthony Rickett noticed him in front of Police Court.

Richitt took Calley into custody for questioning and discovered, he said, that the weapons had been stolen from a D street store Yesterday Calley was held for the grand jury under a bond of $5,000 on a charge of housebreaking and larceny. At the hearing Calley entered a plea of not guilty.

2 Air Mail Pilots Land After Flying "Blind"

Flying practically "blind" with the use of radio beacons and improved instruments, two air mail pilots early yesterday landed at Washington-Hoover Airport.

The fliers, Larry Pabst and W. L. Jamieson, both carrying heavy loads of mail, were forced to stay close to the ground in their trips into the local airport. Pabst came in from Newark, N. J., while Jamieson flew up from Richmond. Bad weather kept all passenger planes on the ground during the day.

Kensington Fights Return of Saloon

Maryland Legislature to Be Asked to Make It Impossible.

Vigorously opposing the old-time saloon, the Kensington Chamber of Commerce last night voted to petition the Maryland Legislature to enact legislation during the current session forestalling the possibility of the return of saloons in Maryland.

The chamber discussed the proposed $300,000 bond issue of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission. Sentiment expressed was favorable to issue, except the method of financing through an assessment of $1 for users.

R. F. Greene, H. D. Chappell, George Curtis Shinn, E. W. Sheppard and J. T. Lewis were named a committee to nominate officers for the ensuing year.

JAPAN MAKING WIDE WAR MACHINE SHIFT

Big Increase in Modernized Arms Set for Service in Manchuria.

Tokyo, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—A fundamental readjustment of the Japanese empire's military establishment, under which home forces will be decreased to permit reinforcement of the army in Manchuria, was announced by the war office today.

The war office's plan calls for sweeping modernization of arms and other war material, for the intensive training of at least 100,000 officers and men in the use of modern weapons and for several administrative reforms.

Although the number of units in Manchuria will be only a little increased, the quality of the equipment of the Japanese forces there will be greatly improved. They will be provided with more airplanes, tanks, heavy guns and motorized units and with improved means of communication.

To buttress the Manchurian army the forces in Japan proper will be reduced as much as possible. By unofficial estimates, at least a quarter of Japan's standing army, which totals 17 divisions, or 230,000 men, at present, is in Manchuria. That would be approximately 57,000 troops. A war office spokesman said, however, that the Japanese forces on duty in the province total less than 40,000. Under the readjustment plan the strength of the Manchurian army would be raised to 60,000 or 65,000 well-equipped troops within two years, the spokesman added.

Funds for the readjustment were included in the army's 1933-34 budget of 448,000,000 yen (about $94,000,000) announced November 25.

Is in Serious Condition at Hospital; Virginian Is Hero in Dark.

While wandering around the municipal fish wharf last night, Alexander Furr, 63, of 2524 K street northwest, misjudged his distance in the dark and walked overboard. Charles Hudnell, of Ophelia, Va., saw Furr disappear into the murky depths of the Potomac and dived after him.

The rescuer succeeded in getting Furr onto a piling and held him there until the Harbor police arrived. Furr was removed to the precinct station where he was given artificial respiration until the fire rescue squad arrived.

He was removed to Emergency Hospital, where he was admitted and treated for exposure. His condition was said to be serious.

Realty Men Will Reply To Rent Charge Today

Washington real estate men will go before the Senate District rent investigating subcommittee at 10:30 o'clock this morning to reply to charges by Oscar H. Brinkman, committee investigator, that a real estate combination in restraint of trade exists in Washington.

Roger J. Whiteford, counsel for the Washington Real Estate Board, and Rufus S. Lusk, who has made a statistical survey of rents for the board, will take the stand in rebuttal of Brinkman's charges.

Wheeler Supports Bryan's Silver Plan

Senator Urges Passage of 16-to-1 Ratio Bill in New York Speech.

New York, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Advocating enactment of his bill to remonetize silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 with gold, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, asserted in a speech tonight that neither Democratic nor Republican leaders had offered anything that would go to the root of the economic problem facing the world.

A supporter of Franklin D. Roosevelt for the Presidency, Wheeler warned of a financial and political revolt unless Congress took prompt and drastic action to assist the unemployed and restore higher commodity prices, and added:

"In the face of this national crisis what are our political and financial leaders offering as a solution for this problem? Can anyone name a solitary proposal that has been advanced that deals with the basic and fundamental causes of this depression? I have studied the various remedies that are being offered by the Republican and Democratic leaders, but I fail to find in them any ground for even a hope that they will save the country at this time or prevent a recurrence of such a disaster in the future."

Woman Held for Check Trial.

D. C. BEER LICENSE FEE IS DISCUSSED

Richards, Lusk and West in Conference; $25 to $250 Scale Suggested.

The levy of a beer tax against wholesalers was suggested yesterday by Assessor William P. Richards to Rufus S. Lusk, executive officer of the Crusaders, who today will complete his draft of the District beer bill.

The bill, which will be presented today to Representative Loring Black (Democrat), of New York, probably will carry with it the provision of the collection of the Federal and District taxes in the manner suggested by Mr. Richards.

The general phases of control of beer sales in the District were discussed at a conference at the District Building of Mr. Lusk, Mr. Richards and Assistant Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West.

Representative Black intends to introduce the bill as soon as it has been completed by Mr. Lusk, so as to have it considered at the first meeting after the New Year of the House District committee.

The method of levying the beer tax, as suggested by Mr. Richards, is the same procedure followed in collecting the taxes on gasoline. Under the draft of the beer bill, a $5 Federal tax and a $2.50 District tax for each barrel would be assessed.

Other phases of beer legislation, discussed at the conference, were the issuance of licenses for sellers by the superintendent of licenses and the enforcement of the license laws by the Police Department.

The license fee has not been decided upon, but has been estimated at from $25 to $250 for each place for beer dispensation. Before the Sheppard law, which was the District prohibition law enacted in 1914, the license fee for a saloon, selling hard liquor and beer, was $1,500.

limitation in the Volstead act, said he probably would withdraw this plan, if the committee was disposed to report the pending measure without referring it to a subcommittee.

Nevertheless, Blaine is going forward with his study of the constitutional problems involved in the bill in order to save time if the measure is finally referred to his subcommittee.

Norris reiterated yesterday his opposition to opening hearings on the beer legislation, saying it would keep the bill in committee until March 4 if all those who have asked to testify were heard.

Several members of the committee, he added, have expressed opposition to hearings and have said they did not want to listen to a repetition of testimony which has been presented previously many times.

Several of the senators who appeared for the meeting yesterday predicted the committee would act swiftly when a quorum is obtained next week, and none asked to have the bill sent to a subcommittee for hearings.

The conviction among members of the committee that the Supreme Court will uphold the constitutionality of the bill, if it is approved, apparently is increasing. Senator King, Utah Democrat, said he felt certain the courts "would follow the legislative declaration of Congress" as to what constitutes an intoxicating beverage.

Similar expressions have come from other members of the group. Their chief concern is what attitude President Hoover will take. Senator Dill (Democrat), Washington, suggested yesterday that the committee might save time by ascertaining his views in advance, but no attempt was made to do so.

Senate Committee To Study 5-Day Bill

Dill Doubts Black's Plan to Scatter Work Is Constitutional.

(Associated Press.)

A Senate subcommittee was appointed yesterday for hearings on the Black bill, which proposes to put American labor on a five-day week, six-hour-day basis.

Introduced by Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, the bill would exclude from interstate commerce products on which workers were required to labor more than 30 hours a week.

Naming himself as chairman Senator Norris also appointed Senators Borah (Republican), Idaho; Robinson (Republican) Indiana; Walsh (Democrat), Montana, and Black.

Doubt that the proposal is constitutional was expressed by Senator Dill (Democrat), Washington, but Black said he was confident the Government had the power to enforce such a law under its constitutional control of interstate commerce.

wish you a happy New Year. I'll see you again soon."

Friends who said they ran across Gerguson in various night clubs last week quoted him as relating the episode of his arrival on the Europa, following his discharge from a French prison. He told police today, however, that he just had arrived from Canada, scoffing at reports of the Europa coup and the reputation he said had been built up for him.

"You'd better tell your jailers to watch me carefully," he drawled in his Oxford accent. "I'm said to be a very desperate criminal. I suppose I am to be accused of murder, at least."

He will be accused of entering the country illegally, authorities said, before a special board of inquiry at Ellis Island tomorrow. They said that the charge would hold if he failed to undergo a customs inspection on arriving, regardless of his citizenship status.

The brand of tobacco the "prince" bought today got him into trouble in London. He used to charge it there, until the manager of the store penetrated his identity and had him arrested.

The manager later was transferred to the firm's Fifth avenue branch, which Gerguson patronized today. Gerguson ran into him here one time and they became good friends.

"Prince Michael" liked to recount that he was introduced to the tobacco on a fox hunt one time with "my friend Eddie—the Prince of Wales, you know."

PRESIDENT SPEEDING ON TO PALM BEACH

Hopes to Gain Day en Route; Expects to Confer With Harry Guggenheim.

With President Hoover in Florida Inland Passage, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Seeking to gain a day in arriving at his lower Florida fishing grounds, President Hoover pushed on down the Florida east coast waterways far after nightfall tonight in hope of arriving at Palm Beach tomorrow instead of Friday as originally planned.

Instead of anchoring as usual when darkness fell, the presidential party went on for more than three hours with the aid of an expert pilot. Lawrence Richey, presidential secretary aboard the Sequoia, said Mr. Hoover hoped to reach Palm Beach by tomorrow afternoon and possibly begin his search for sailfish and barracuda during the early evening.

Harry F. Guggenheim, American Ambassador to Cuba, is expected to join the Hoover party late tomorrow at Palm Beach. Richey said, however, that the ambassador had been asked to contact the party long before its departure from Washington and that this projected visit had no connection with political affairs in Cuba.

After a comparatively slow passage during the morning, the Hoover fishing flotilla gained speed during the late afternoon after finding deeper water in the Indian River. The fleet anchored tonight near Sebastian Inlet.

Charles Walsh, National Political Leader, Dies

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Charles A. Walsh, 73, president of a Davie citrus groves company and formerly treasurer of the national Democratic committee, died at his home at Davie last night. His death followed closely that of his wife, who was killed in an automobile accident September 30.

Walsh was treasurer of the national Democratic committee under the late Tom Taggart. He became a Republican during the first Hoover campaign, however, as a result of his beliefs in regard to the tariff question.

Accused Slayer's Record Checked.

Alexandria, La., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Police authorities holding Anthony Velotta, 27, on a charge of fatally shooting Earl Miller, 21, at the entrance of an amusement club Christmas Eve, today sent fingerprints and a photograph of Velotta to Cleveland, Ohio, authorities seeking to indentify him as a man wanted there for jumping bond in a robbery case.

Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Coffin Have Golden Wedding Today

Mr. and Mrs. George Thomas Coffin, who will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary today. The couple were married 50 years ago in New Bedford, Mass.

Friends and Relatives Will Extend Felicitations at Home.

Today is the day of days for Mr. and Mrs. George Thomas Coffin. At the home of their son, Frank A. Coffin, 6523 First street northwest, friends and relatives will gather tonight in celebration of their golden wedding anniversary.

It was 50 years ago that Mr. Coffin married Miss Emma Augusta Pakard in New Bedford, Mass. Back through the years come memories of that day when the young bride and bridegroom were forced to hire an express wagon to transport their many wedding gifts following the ceremonies.

They lived in New Bedford for some time, where Mr. Coffin was in the picture-framing trade. He later became a machinist and the couple moved to Boston where the bridegroom was employed in the Maine Railroad shops.

After a few years Mr. and Mrs. Coffin moved to Lynn, Mass., and he entered the services of the General Electric Co. He left that position to become a salesman, and continued in that line until retiring some years ago.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Coffin were born in New Bedford and were childhood sweethearts. Mrs. Coffin's father conducted a wholesale grocery business.

Before coming to Washington the couple lived in ten States, including the South and far West.

They have three children, Frank, Esther May Coffin and Fay Lincoln Coffin. The latter two are in California.

ELISABETH MORROW WED TO WELSHMAN

Englewood, N. J., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Miss Elisabeth Reeve Morrow, eldest daughter of the late Senator and Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, today became the wife of Aubrey Niel Morgan, of Brynderwen, Llandaff, Wales.

The ceremony was performed in the library at Next Day Hill, the Morrow home, by the Rev. Dr. Carl H. Elmore, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Englewood. He was assisted by the Rev. Dr. Thomas Guthrie Speers, pastor of the Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church, of Baltimore, Md.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Constance Cutter Morrow, Smith student, who was presented to society a few weeks ago. Miss Morrow was given in marriage by her brother, Dwight W. Morrow, jr. Brig. Gen. Jay J. Morrow, brother of the late senator, was best man.

No formal invitations were issued for the wedding and only relatives and intimate friends were present. No list of guests was made public, nor were the immediate plans of the couple announced. It previously was announced Mr. and Mrs. Morgan would live in Wales.

Mrs. Morgan, sister of Mrs. Charles A. Lindburgh, is a graduate of Milton Academy, Milton, Mass., and Smith College. Always interested in child education, she taught English in Mexico while her father was American Ambassador, and later she founded the Little School, a nursery school in Englewood.

Mr. Morgan is a graduate of Charterhouse and of Jesus College, Cambridge. He is a member of the firm of David Morgan, Ltd., of Cardiff, Wales, founded by his grandfather. Morgan is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Llewellyn Morgan.

5 SOUTHERN STATES SUFFER FROM FLOOD

Rains in Georgia Mountains Cause Portions of Rome to Be Inundated.

(Associated Press.)

Rivers in five Southern States slashed angrily at their banks today or overflowed them and backed over the surrounding lowlands with stages higher than those of the overflows a month ago predicted by the Weather Bureau.

The most important rises were predicted for the Etowah and Oostanaula, in Georgia, the Coosa, in Georgia and Alabama, and the Alabama, in Alabama.

Flood warnings also were issued, however, for the Santee, in South Carolina; the Tombigbee, in Alabama, and the French Broad and the Upper Tennessee, in Tennessee.

The Etowah and Oostanaula, which converge at Rome, Ga., yesterday invaded lowlying western portions of that city, driving 50 persons from their homes. North Montgomery, Ala., and the business district of Wetumpka, 16 miles away, also prepared for overflows in the Coosa and Alabama.

The Chattahoochee in Georgia was out of its banks in a number of sparsely settled small lowland areas, and the Atlanta Weather Bureau said it probably would rise near the 22-foot stage, 3 feet above the flood line, by Friday night at West Point, Ga.

Flood stage for the Tombigbee was predicted at Aberdeen and Columbus, Miss., and the Black Warrior, which threatened Northport, Ala., was expected to reach 58 feet at Tuscaloosa.

The Coosa at Rome stood today at 32 feet, 7 feet above flood stage, and was expected to crest around 34 feet, 1 foot short of the level reached in 1916, when considerable damage was done. Water ran into basements at the back of some stores on Broad street, the elevated main thoroughfare, but ground floors were not affected.

MRS. H. F. CLARK RITES.

J. J. CARTY FUNERAL AT ARLINGTON TODAY

"Wizard of Wires" Gave Distinguished Service in Phone Developing.

The body of John J. Carty, "wizard of the wires" and former executive of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., who died Tuesday in Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, will be brought here for burial today in Arlington Cemetery. His death resulted from complications following an operation last Friday. He was 71 years old.

Since 1919 Mr. Carty had served as vice president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., retiring in 1930. He was chief engineer of the company for many years.

His services in the engineering profession brought Mr. Carty the distinction of being one of the greatest in his line. He is credited with researches which played an important part in the development of modern long distance telephoning.

Served in World War.

Mr. Carty was born April 14, 1861, in Cambridge, Mass. Following completion of his education, he became interested in the possibilities of the telephone, which Alexander Graham Bell, then living in Cambridge, had invented.

Subsequently, in 1879, Mr. Carty entered the services of the Bell Telephone Co. From that time on, with exception of the World War period, he took an active part in the progress of telephone development.

At the outbreak of the war, being a major in the Signal Corps Reserves, Mr. Carty was called to active service. He organized twelve battalions of picked Signal Corps troops, who furnished the principal communication group during the first phase of the conflict.

Chairman of Laboratories.

He became director of the United States Army's wire communications in France, and was responsible for maintenance of transatlantic communication between Gen. Pershing and the War Department here. He left the Army as a brigadier general.

Outstanding among his telephone achievements was the completion of the transcontinental line. Soon after this engineers directed by Mr. Carty transmitted speech by radiophone from New York to the Hawaiian Islands and Canal Zone.

With the incorporation of the Bell System with the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Mr. Carty became chairman of the Bell Telephone Laboratories.

Received Many Degrees.

Mr. Carty was a member of the National Academy of Sciences, National Research Council, American Academy of Arts and Sciences, American Philosophical Society, American Institute of Electrical Engineers, the Carnegie Institution and many other scientific nad engineering groups.

The pioneer in telephone development received the degree of doctor of engineering from Stevens Institute of Technology in 1915 and New York University in 1922. He also specialized in science and engineering at the University of Chicago, Bowdoin, Tufts, Yale, Princeton and the University of Pennsylvania.

Honorary pallbearers at the funeral will include W. S. Gifford, president A. T. & T.; Dr. Frank B. Jewett, vice president, A. T. & T.; Frederick P. Keppel, president Carnegie Foundation; Dr. Stewart Patton, Johns Hopkins Hospital; Herman Aaron, New York City; Gen. C. McK. Saltzman, Washington; Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president National Geographic Society; Dr. J. C. Merriam, Carnegie Foundation.

COL. TEBBETTS RITES.

Full Military Honors Are Accorded Retired Army Officer.

Full military honors were accorded Col. Harry H. Tebbetts, U. S. A., retired, who was buried yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery. He died Sunday at his home at the Kenesaw Apartments.

Col. Tebbetts, who was 58 years old, was retired from the Army service last year for disability. He was in the Judge Advocate General's Department. He was a graduate of West Point and had served 36 years in the Army.

Honorary pallbearers were Col. John P. Wade, Col. George A. Herbst, Col. Duncan K. Major, Lieut. Col. Emory S. Adams, Lieut. Col. William F. Pearson and Maj. Edward Roth, jr.

Col. Tebbetts was awarded several citations and a Distinguished Service Medal for gallantry in action. Surviving him is his wife, Mrs. Frances A. Tebbetts, of Washington.

W. H. FRY OBSEQUIES.

Government Soil Physicist Will Be Buried in North Carolina.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. today for William H. Fry, 44, soil physicist, of the Department of Agriculture, who died suddenly Tuesday morning at his home, 2106 F street northwest.

According to coworkers in the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, he was the first physicist to discover the microscopic methods of soil analysis. The treatise he has finished, he described to his wife as his "best work."

The services will be held at Birch's funeral home, 3034 M street northwest. The Rev. Zé Barney T. Phillips, chaplain of the Senate and rector of the Church of the Epiphany, will officiate. The body will be taken to Raleigh, N. C., for burial tomorrow.

CHARLES SCHLOSSER DIES.

Caster at G. P. O. Was in Government Service 25 Years.

Charles Schlosser, 53, of 323 Sixteenth street southeast, a caster at the Government Printing Office, died yesterday at Sibley Hospital, following an operation.

He had been in Government service for the last 25 years. Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Grace G. Schlosser, two sisters, Miss Carrie Schlosser, and Mrs. Lizzie Thomas, and two brothers Will Schlosser, all of Washington and Henry Schlosser, of Philadelphia.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at H. M. Padgett's funeral home. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

J. S. HICKS FUNERAL.

Navy Yard Employe, 58, Will Be Buried This Afternoon.

Funeral services for James Snyder Hicks, 58, Navy Yard employe, who died Tuesday will be held at his home in Silver Spring, Md., at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mr. Hicks is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bertha B. Hicks; a son, Lieut. James M. Hicks, U. S. N., and four brothers and two sisters.

Theodore L. Cole, Law Author, Dies

Washington Scholar, 80, Was Graduate of Wisconsin University.

Theodore Lee Cole, 80, prominently active in civic and social circles in Washington until he moved from the city two years ago, died yesterday in Montclair, N. J., after an extended illness.

The former head of the L. T. Cole Statute Law Book Co. of this city, and author of several law books, Mr. Cole was a librarian and scholar of note.

Born at Albany, N. Y., he was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1871. He was a member of the Phi Beta Kappa Fraternity. Locally he was active in the Cosmos Club, the Kalorama Road Citizens Association and the District Library Association.

Surviving him is a son, Felix Cole, American Consul at Riga, Latvia. Funeral services will be held in Montclair today. His body will be cremated and the ashes buried in the Rock Creek Cemetery.

EARTH IS DECLARED HAVING WEAK BODY

Strength Confined Mostly to Thin Crust, Prof. Daly, of Harvard, Says.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—The true strength of the earth is confined almost entirely to its comparatively thin crust, Prof. Reginald A. Daly, of Harvard, retiring president of the Geological Society of America, told that body here tonight.

Speaking before the annual smoker held in conjunction with the forty-fifth annual meeting of the society, Prof. Daly, in a discussion on "The Depth of the Earth," declared that despite remarkable discoveries in recent years the best that could be said for modern conclusions on the constitution of the earth was that they formed a working hypothesis.

Ninety-nine and nine-tenths per cent of the volume of the earth, Daly said, "must forever remain invisible and untouchable."

Present-day conclusions on the nature of the globe envision a crust of ordinary crystalline rocks which, in continental regions is about 40 miles thick, and under the deep oceans somewhat thicker.

Temperature Too High.

Below the crust and to the center of the globe, he said, it is probable the temperature is too high to permit the formation of crystals. From the crust to about 1,800 miles down, the material is vitreous, a glassy rock more rigid on the average than steel.

This thick shell overlies a core regarded by students of physics as essentially a huge ball of molten, metallic iron.

The great heat of the interior, Prof. Daly said he regarded as largely primitive, inherited from the earth's beginning.

"Because more than 97 per cent of the earth is too hot to crystallize its body is extremely weak," he said. "True strength is almost, if not entirely, confined to the crust, which being so thin, must bend if, over wide areas, it becomes newly loaded with glacial ice, ocean water or deposits of sand and mud.

Cites Major Reshapings.

"It must bend in the opposite sense if widely extended loads of such material be removed. The theory thus accounts for some of the major reshapings of the planet during its long history. It seems best to account for the continued existence of dry land; for the origin of chains of high mountains; for the rise of lava into the crust or all the way to the earth's surface as in volcanoes and the great chemical variety of the world's lavas."

The Geological Society and its affiliated societies, the Paleontological Society and the Mineralogical Society of America, which are holding their annual meetings here, were welcomed to Cambridge earlier in the day by A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard.

Packard President Here Gives Dealers Luncheon

Oscar Coolican, president of the Packard Washington Motor Car Co., distributors for Hudson and Essex Terraplane cars in this territory, was host to his dealer organization at a luncheon yesterday at Wardman Park Hotel.

The luncheon was followed by a business meeitng at which factory plans for 1933 were outlined by R. R. Cunningham, of the Hudson Motor Car Co. It was brought out, among other things, that in 1933 Hudson products will range in price from $425 to $1,500 at the factory, and will be sufficiently wide in scope as far as body style and price is concerned to fit the needs of 96 out of every 100 buyers.

Prisoner Escapes During Show.

Iola, Kans., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Jailer Charles Nelson took his prisoner, Lloyd Larramore, to a picture show as his last bit of recreation before starting a two-year sentence at the State Penitentiary for child desertion. The jailer became so interested in the show that he didn't notice until after it was over that Larramore had walked out and escaped.

ECONOMISTS REVEAL TECHNOCRACY VIEWS

Experts Agree Machines Are Not Principal Cause of Depression.

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Technocracy, the study of machines which is sweeping the popular imagination as a possible remedy for depression, was explained today to a symposium on unemployment held by economists at the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Their comments were unanimous that technocracy is not a major remedy, and that machines are not the principal, nor, said some of them, even a serious cause of unemployment.

There was one warning voice that misinterpretations of what machines have done might lead to "wrong conclusions."

All these comments were brief, all made during formal presentation of papers, and when discussion was called for at the noon recess of the symposium, there was none.

Some Called Blind.

All but one of the comments was made before the technocracy paper was delivered by Dr. Walter Rautenstraugh, head of the department of industrial engineering of Columbia University, one of the group of engineers studying the effects of machine production upon social and business development.

The study is called technocracy, and some of its critics referred to it by the older engineering term of technology.

Dr. Rautenstraugh began by likening the critics who had spoken before his presentation to the "blind men who went to see an elephant and when they came back they all had different descriptions. I don't think that is a very fair basis of criticism."

Then he began his speech with "I don't say anything about prices." This was taken as a reference to comments by some of the recently published interpretations of the technocracy studies, that prices can not be continued as fair standards of values in distributing property.

Explains Principles.

His talk was an explanation of the principles of technocracy. These were that in the past 200 years "energy," that is power and machines, have multiplied man's ability to produce goods and do useful work for himself by 75 to 100 fold.

Therefore technocracy believes that "energy hours," the measure of work accomplished by machines, will replace "man hours," the amount of work a man can do with his hands unaided by machines. The results of this change, he thinks, will be profound.

Man will labor less and less hours, but may produce more and more in the shorter time. Therefore industrial planning of the future must be, he said, quite different from any existing in the past.

What the specific differences in planning may be, he did not define, but stated four principles for guidance. First, and most important, he said, is purpose of the business enterprise; second, its program; third, its personnel, and fourth, the "property or material means available to the group for its sustenance and growth."

Fisher Skeptical.

Prof. Irving Fisher, of Yale, who opened the symposium, said that the only bearing technocracy has on unemployment was in the fact that more technical activity might enable the world to recover more quickly from depression.

Prof. James W. Angell, of Columbia University, said that the portion of unemployment arising from technology is unavoidable and that its "seriousness has been overemphasized." Far more important, he held, is control of bank credit and of savings and investments. Too much or too little of either he held as likely to be disastrous.

The paper of Alvin Hansen, of the University of Minnesota, was read in his absence. The application of technological approach to industrial problems, his paper stated, would appeal to engineers, but he warned there are dangers of drawing wrong conclusions.

Prof. Dugald C. Jackson, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, defended the machine as a benefactor of humanity. One "new thing" for which it is largely responsible, he said, is "the substantial equality of women with men."

DIAMONDS

Advance in Price Against the Trend

But our present stock of finest quality gem diamonds is still at low prices —and at our lowest mark-up in 57 years!

While most commodities have been scaling downward to lower price levels during the last two years, diamonds, often classed among luxuries, have more than held their own. Lately prices of these gems have turned sharply upward.

"Two reasons stand out in accounting for the diamond's amazing ability to move 'against the trend,'" says a bulletin from the headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "In times of depression there is a tendency among certain peoples to condense and stabilize accumulated wealth by putting it into gems; second, and most important, more than half of the world's production in diamonds, in quantity, is used each year in industry."

4 Students Crashing Party By Fire Escape Released

Special to The Washington Post.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Dec. 28.—Charges of disorderly conduct against four college students, growing out of their attempt to "crash" the swanky Thanksgiving Eve debutantes' ball in the Heights Casino were dismissed in Adams street court this morning by Magistrate Jeanette Brill.

They are John L. Belford, Manhattan College; Gerald McAllister, law student at St. John's College; William T. Stafford, Georgetown University, and Henry G. Howley, of the Park Chambers Hotel, Manhattan. All four had invitations to the affair, but as they arrived a few minutes after 2 o'clock the doorman demanded that each pay $5, as the invitations were accepted only up to that hour.

The youths demurred at this entrance fee and decided they would "crash" the party via the fire escape. Persons living in the neighborhood spied their gleaming shirt fronts on the roof at 57 Montague street, which adjoins the Casino, and telephoned the police. A few minutes later the neighborhood was thrown into an uproar as shrieking police cars converged on the scene. The youths showed their invitations and established their identity, but they were locked up on a disorderly conduct charge.

In court today Magistrate Brill said: "Case dismissed," and then added, with a smile, "and don't do it again."

CAPT. ACKERMAN IS BURIED.

Retired Naval Officer, 73, Is Accorded Full Military Honors.

Capt. Albert A. Ackerman, 73, U. S. N., retired, who died at sea aboard a commercial steamer en route to the United States from South America, on December 15, was buried at Arlington National Cemetery yesterday with full military honors.

He served at the Navy Yard in Washington in 1904 and at the Naval Gun Factory here in 1909. He was connected with the Smithsonian Institution as a mineralogist and took part in the Greeley relief expedition.

SECOND BALL TRIAL BEGINS WEDNESDAY

J. Vernon Smith Is Reelected President of Arlington Citizens Society.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Returning yesterday from Richmond, where he was in conference with Assistant Attorney General Collins Denny, Jr., State Auditor of Public Accounts Coleman T. Andrews and Assistant State Auditor R. B. Jordon, Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas stated that he is ready to proceed with the second trial of former County Treasurer E. Wade Ball.

The trial opens next Wednesday in the Circuit Court of Arlington County before Judge Walter T. McCarthy. Ball will be tried on a charge involving the alleged misuse of county funds totaling $515,959. Ball was acquitted last September on a charge involving the alleged misuse of State funds amounting to approximately $24,000.

Douglas will be assisted in the prosecution by Denny. Sheriff Howard B. Fields has summoned 96 veniremen from which a jury of twelve will be selected.

J. Vernon Smith was reelected president of the Arlington Citizens Association last night at the Patrick Henry School. Other officers are Rufus Trice, first vice president; Mrs. J. B. Lowell, second vice president; Roger Daniels, secretary, and Mrs. C. V. Allen, treasurer.

Delegates to the Arlington County Civic Federation are Wyle Fuller, George A. Collier, R. E. Royall and J. Vernon Smith; and alternates, John P. Agnew, A. E. Brooks, J. H. White and Rufus Trice.

The association approved a resolution of the Arlington County Civic Federation indorsing the southern route for the extension of Lee boulevard from Station 107 to the Memorial Bridge.

Plans for the drive for $12,000, which starts January 16, by the citizens' committee in cooperation with the Arlington County Welfare Board, to aid unemployment, was outlined by Board Member Charles F. Kincheloe and Grover E. Payne, campaign chairman.

The office of chairman of the Arlington County Board expires on Saturday night. The board, at a special meeting tomorrow night at 7:30, at the courthouse, will either elect a new chairman or reelect the incumbent, Harry A. Fellows.

Tomorrow afternoon, at 1 o'clock, the Arlington County Democratic Women's Club will hold a special meeting in the Democratic headquarters at Clarendon.

4 Convicts' Break Ends in Auto Upset

Police Chase Foils Quartet Fleeing Maryland Jail in Guard's Car.

Stealing a guard's auto, four prisoners at the Maryland House of Correction yesterday made a desperate dash for liberty, only to be captured when the car turned over in Hyattsville after a wild chase by police.

The men, all of Washington, made their escape yesterday afternoon from the reformatory at Jessups, Md., in a light car. Officials at the institution thought they would head for Washington and sent out a lookout to police in Prince Georges County.

In Hyattsville, Officer Lloyd A. Anderson, son of Chief Albert Anderson, recognized the men from the broadcast description and caled to them to stop. Instead they turned off the Baltimore boulevard into a side street, with Andreson in hot pursuit. Attempting to make a turn into West Madison street, the stolen car overturned and was completely wrecked. The men, arrested and taken back to the House of Correction, gave their names as Spencer Quill, Otho Jones, Robert Johnson and Oscar Gillman. All of them were slightly cut by flying glass and Johnson suffered a broken finger.

4 Maryland Men Held For Jury on Rum Counts

W. W. Mattingly and Jack Mattingly, arrested several days ago when Federal dry agents raided a whisky-aging plant near Mechanicsville, Md., were yesterday held in bond of $1,000 for the Federal grand jury after a hearing before U. S. Commissioner J Frank Parran, in Marlboro. The agents seized about 500 gallons of whisky which was stored in a heated room designed to age the beverage more quickly.

Eugene Wells and Thomas L. Turner, arrested near their homes in Sunderland, Md., also were held for the grand jury after a hearing before Mr. Parran. Their bond, on charges of sale and possession of liquor, was set at $1,000. Two other men, Sidney Thompson and Garfield Makie, arrested after a raid on a multiple still near Aquasco, were released after a hearing yesterday because of lack of evidence.

The Federal Diary

By GEORGE D. RILEY

Riley

HE is secretary of three organizations. He has a complete collection of Jules Verne's works, including an autographed letter from Verne. He is a spinner of yarns, yet he toils like clockwork on the job. He is an amateur paleontologist. He is author of several marine weather publications on phenomena. He has a rare collection of rocks, minerals, fossils and Indian relics of all kinds, at his home in Cherrydale, Va. He never did like mathematics. He likes to express himself in his own way.

He is Willis E. Hurd, marine division, Weather Bureau, Department of Agriculture.

We light our pipes. Friend Hurd likes Granger. I fill up with Union Leader from my Edgeworth box. And having got lit up together, we get going.

Mr. Hurd hails from New Hampshire, which has no connection here.

"You have found the head of a femur of a titanotherium or brontherium," said J. W. Gidley, then curator of the National Museum, when Mr. Hurd showed him what he had brought back from the bad lands of South Dakota on the banks of the Grand River back in 1918, while in service in the region for the Agriculture Department. In short, Mr. Hurd had found part of an early rhinocerous.

Mr. Hurd's eyes brighten with the spirit of adventure as he recalls his fossil finds.

But we must move along. Mr. Hurd's interests are by no means confined to fossil explorations.

Time was when Pluck and Win, Golden Hours, Young's Magazine and others were the small boys' delight and grownups had their peek between the paper-back covers, too. Chances are many Post readers have read stories from Mr. Hurd's hand, yarns of boy adventures and Old Sleuth tales. 'Member when hearts were young?

Butterflies, in all their radiance, have played a large part in the long list of Mr. Hurd's hobbies, from caterpillar stage to full-fledged powdry-winged creatures.

The Navy Department uses Friend Hurd's graphs and treatises on water spouts, tropical cyclones and other natural phenomena in and on the briny wastes and relies on his data as its guides.

Yet, with all his work and all his interests, Mr. Hurd finds time to serve as secretary for Masonic Lodge No. 42, Cherrydale; secretary of the District department, American Federation of Government Employes, and secretary of Weather Bureau Lodge, No. 23, A. F. G. E.

Who can match Mr. Hurd's variety of interests and hobbies?

Last time we left Swarmi Fedd so close to a Paris taxicab driver that there was scarcely room between them for words to pass. Now proceed with this story, hair-raising even after Herpicide has failed.

Swarmi Fedd thought the driver was a seagoing so-and-so and said as much (to himself). But poor Swarmi in a land without friends, stood at ease, stepped three paces to the rear and two to one side and the tension was relieved. The most important thing in his mind was to deliver the note to the handsome Paris brunette and he repaired, let us say mended, his plans to carry out his purpose.

So his big purpose was to meet up with the petite brunette, living at the address typewritten on the envelope containing the note. So his chauffeur——

A. H. Haug, watchman in charge of the press parking space on the north side of the Commerce Building, really has a job. It's his duty to see that the cars stay parked there only two hours. And you know 'tis when good press cars get parked together. They'd hard to scatter.

But parking cars isn't the only thing A. H. Haug is famous for. He is a former service man. Then, too, he makes hammocks from small white ropes. And though we've never ridden in one of his hammocks, we know some who have and they say they're very good, strong and thoroughly ventilated. We can all take a ride.

Many Government building guards are former service men.

"I think," said Isaac Gregg, Postoffice Department, "that the William Penn postage stamp issued in 1932 was the most attractive."

"I'LL take two negatives just to be positive," announced Arthur Ellis, Post staff photographer, as he started snapping for the accompanying view of these Uncle Sam star boarders, Mrs. White Rat and her litter of fourteen, only a few hours old, soon to help prove points in nutrition.

WILLIS E. HURD.

Dr. Chester D. Tolle, chemical laboratory, Fisheries Bureau, has set out to determine the relative oil content and its value in salmon as compared with that from our largely imported article, codliver oil, that old reliable source of much of our vitamin A.

From the salmon canneries' waste and salmon liver a more satisfactory and palatable oil in good quantities is being produced. The salmon head, for example, is rich in oil.

The white rats play their part about like this:

They are placed in certain cages, kept sanitary, and the containers are tagged. Foods containing certain properties become their diet. Perhaps certain vitamins are excluded and the result is watched on the chart. Often litter mates show entirely different symptoms, simply because each has been given its own special ration in separated cages.

It is one of Uncle Sam's ways of proving for the benefit of a home industry that salmon can produce greater oil vitamin content which has been supplied for years from foreign sources, says Lewis Radcliffe, deputy Fisheries commissioner.

She could leave well enough alone, but she doesn't leave her leave-taking in the leave class, does Esther King, Commerce, who continues to go to work daily, despite her furlough leave. She disposes of the former day's work, which she only seems equipped to do.

Some day Washington bridge fans may hear more of a certain foursome that meets every Wednesday night. "The Four Horsemen," as their friends have dubbed them, are Lelia Brown, chief, Withholding Section, Internal Revenue; Ina Russell, adjudicator, Veterans' Administration; Nell Bishop, law clerk, Department of Justice, and Emma Luebbing, secretary to the Assistant Director of Prohibition. And can these gals play bridge! They even admit it themselves.

Prof. Coyle Acuff, of Washburn, Tenn., suspended his teaching duties during the holidays and came to Washington for a visit with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Luther G. Acuff. Luther G. Acuff is an inspector in the plant control division, Bureau of Industrial Alcohol.

Now we'll really see if "two can live as cheaply as one." Miss Helen Fitzgerald, of Salem, Ill., and Floyd J. Dubas, War Department, were married Tuesday at St. Thomas Apostle Church, Woodley road. Attendants, the bride's sisters, Mrs. T. J. Kastanek and Jeanette Fitzgerald, and T. J. Kastanek and Edward Kusek. Reception, 1820 Clydesdale place northwest. Fifteen friends. Four-course dinner, Sholl's Grill. Home, The Netherlands, 1860 Columbia road northwest.

A. O. (Bo) Martens, Bureau of Internal Revenue, is absent this week, due to a hurried trip home in Wisconsin because of his mother's death. Our sympathy.

Regret to hear of the death of Miss Catherine Austin's father. Miss Austin, now with Postoffice, formerly was with Federal Farm Board.

Don't believe all they tell you about husbands and wives playing partners at bridge. They do team up well. Witness the case of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Frisbie and Dr. and Mrs. C. C. McDonnell, regulars in the Food and Drugs-Chemistry and Soils Duplicate Bridge Club, Monday, at the Roosevelt, under direction of Mrs. Eugene Nolan and Mrs. M. C. Robinson. The preceding time they tied for fifth place.

This week the Frisbies won first place and the McDonnells were runners-up, tied with Mrs. F. C. Blanck and Mrs. F. M. Jacobs. Ordinarily, Dr. McDonnell and Mr. Frisbie are partners in other tournaments.

Third place honors this week went to Dr. F. C. Blanck and Dr. W. W. Skinner; fourth place, Mrs. Dan Dahle and Miss Caroline Thrasher.

In a letter addressed to all lodges in Washington and in the field, John Arthur Shaw, president, A. F. G. E., appeals to members "to alleviate suffering among the unemployed this winter."

One way in which this may be done, says Mr. Shaw, "is for each lodge to collect as much unused clothing as possible and turn it over to the charitable organizations. Lodges located in Washington are requested to turn clothing in to the national office. Our field lodges will act independently in their respective localities. We must not turn our backs on our fellow men during these trying times.

"Government employes are well aware of the hardships that are being faced by the people throughout the country. It is not new for them to have personal contact with suffering and privation. Many of the Federal workers in Washington are helping relatives 'back home' in the States, even though they have had their own salaries cut and are forced to resort to every means of economizing. The reduction has been made on the magnanimous salaries that have been advertised to the country as being so huge by those who delude the people into believing they have the good of the Nation at heart.

"Let us show our fellow citizens that we are not as small-minded as those who advocate taking 90 cents out of a charwoman's wages because she works in a Government building."

2 GUILTY OF USING CAR NOT THEIR OWN

One Gets 10 Months While Companion Is Fined at Hyattsville.

Charged with using autos without permission of the owners, two men were convicted in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday, one of them being sent to the House of Correction for ten months and the other being fined $50.

William McDuffy, colored, of 106 I street northwest, received the jail sentence on the testimony of Constable W. E. Peake. McDuffy also was fined $1 for having no registration card, $10 for having no license, $5 for reckless driving and $5 for disorderly conduct. The car he was using crashed into a stone wall in Hyattsville while being pursued by police.

Frederick Garretson, of 1337 Chiffdress street northeast, received the $50 fine, and was also fined $5 for having no registration card, $10 for having fictitious markers and $10 for disorderly conduct. Fred West, who was riding with him, was fined $5 for disorderly conduct, but charges of occupying an auto without permission of the owner were dismissed.

Harry Lee Washburn was fined $5 for killing a dog belonging to Alden T. Keeting and $5 for crippling a dog belonging to Walter C. Johnson, both of Hyattsville. It was testified that Washburn had shot the dogs when they annoyed him. Three men, Frank Edwards, Granville Gaither and Melvin Mahoney, were released on charges of stealing $48 from Ethel M. Crowley.

Thieves Raid Service Station.

Guns, a clock, a radio and tires valued at several hundred dollars were stolen early yesterday when thieves broke into Gilbert's Service Station, near Meadows, Md., after prying a lock from the door. The robbers first tried a window through which the station was robbed several months ago, but were blocked by shutters installed after the first robbery.

KIWANIANS TO MARK OLD YEAR'S PASSING

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Alexandria Kiwanis Club today will give its "presidents' dinner," at which it will observe the passing of the old year and the birth of the new. Everett A. Hellmuth will be master of ceremonies. D. C. Book, president of the club, will review the closing year and express his appreciation to all who assisted him. The newly elected officers will then be introduced and past presidents will review the history of the club.

Alexandria is passing through an epidemic of grippe, it being estimated that there are more than 1,000 cases at present and that the malady is on the increase. Every physician in the city is working overtime. No deaths have been attributed to grippe, although there have been two from pneumonia.

The Alexandria postoffice shows a drop of approximately 24 per cent in letter mail this Christmas as compared to last year, according to Postmaster F. Clinton Knight. A complete check-up of package mail is now being made, and it is believed this will also show a considerable decrease.

Dolores Ann Treger, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Treger, of 328 North Henry street, was found dead in her crib yesterday. According to Dr. W. E. Beattie, city coroner, the child had been dead several hours when found, having evidently pulled the bedclothing over her face and smothered.

Mrs. Adelaide W. Watkins, widow of Winfield B. Watkins, died yesterday at her home, 426 North Columbus street. She is survived by a son, Milton M. Watkins, and a daughter, Miss Virginia Watkins.

The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

AT seemingly regular intervals there happens into the film colony some casual actress who is recognized at once as the possessor of precisely those attributes which record best in celluloid. Such endowments have a way of impressing themselves upon the consciousness of picture producers without the necessity of awaiting "public reaction." They are born stars, these strangely gifted people.

Diana Wynyard.

The most recent specimen of the species to be gathered to Hollywood's productional heart is Diana Wynyard, seen on the National Theater stage here last season in "The Devil Passes," with Basil Rathbone, Arthur Byron, Cecilia Loftus, Mary Nash, Robert Lorraine and others of note.

English born, Miss Wynyard played a brief season in the legitimate in this country and then wandered westward to appear in "Rasputin" with the three Barrymores, a screen play still hew to Broadway and not yet seen by most of the rest of the Nation.

Before that picture was completed she was chosen for the lead in "Cavalcade," the Noel Coward spectacle being picturized by Fox.

At the moment Miss Wynyard is listening to Ronald Colman make cinematic love for "The Masquerader," in the part in which Elissa Landi would have appeared except for the intervention of a severe attack of influenza.

Miss Wynyard's experience is not unlike Ann Dvorak's in being rushed from one picture to another until she was breathless before her first, "Scarface," ever was released.

As will doubtless be recalled by those who saw her at the National, Miss Wynyard is rather tall—5 feet 7 inches, if you must get out your footrule—and correspondingly slender, with light brown hair and deep blue eyes.

Rather a beauty. And not too-British an accent.

The able company of songsters being heard in "The Student Prince" and "Blossom Time," at the National this week, although several of them have been heard here in the same roles during previous engagements, are, as a matter of fact, playing the first week of their current season. For this reason, perhaps, they were visited last night by the head man of the organization sending them on tour.

Mr. J. J. Shubert, of the well-known brothers of that name, arrived in the Capital last night just to see how the boys and girls are doing, and is remaining over today, and possibly longer, for practically the same purpose.

It would not be surprising if he should sit in on a rehearsal of "Blossom Time" before it goes on tonight for the first time. Then, again, it would not be surprising if he didn't.

Those with a statistical turn of mind, as well as those who carry an adding machine with them at all times, would have had no difficulty whatever yesterday afternoon in arriving at a virtually bullet-proof conclusion that the National was sold out for the matinee of "The Student Prince."

The nights haven't been quite so big, but Saturday's matinee promises to be a repetition of yesterday's and on the full week at a $2 top scale of admission these two old favorite operettas will add up a nice box-office gross, proving—or seeming to tend in that direction—what we have long contended, that one of the things that ails show business is a set of boom-time price scales in a period of panic and budgeted incomes.

"Hold that line!" is a swell exhortation to yell at the box-office, but at $3.30 and $4.40 there is no line left to hold these days. So what?

By no means the least appreciated of the Christmas remembrances reaching this desk is a gold pencil—loaded, praise be, with outsize editorial black lead—from our old friend Harry W. Crull, former manager of the Fox Theater in this city and now serving in a similar capacity at Loew's Empire Theater on Leicester Square, London, W. C. To forestall the acquisitiveness of any mind that might surrender to predatory inclinations, it should be said that identification of the trinket would not be so difficult, since it bears the legend, "A Merry Christmas to Nelson Bell from Olde England." A thoughtful and a kindly gesture on Harry's part, in a spirit for which I am deeply and genuinely grateful.

ZaSu Pitts, in case you are still worrying about the condition of her health, is on the high road to recovery from the desperate illness that necessitated an emergency operation recently, and will soon be well again. If you have ever listened attentively to Miss Thelma Todd in their comic screen colloquies, you will remember that Miss Pitts' first name is pronounced Say-Zoo—even if it is made up of the last and first syllables, respectively, of the names of Aunt Eliza and Aunt Susan.

Following the example of Maurice Chevalier, Lehigh Valley's little brother Rudy, Jeanette MacDonald and numerous others who have given their new shows away to listeners-in over the radio, Kate Smith last night broadcast the musical numbers from her new Paramount picture, "Hello, Everybody," and surely must have created a lot of customers for the film when it is released. They were splendid examples of tunesmithing and Kate sang them like a million dollars. Especially "Moon Song," which originally was intended to be the title of the picture.

One of the treats of the season—that would be Cornelia Otis Skinner in a series of her priceless character studies—will be available to Washington lovers of unique entertainment, come Monday night. Beginning then, in the National Theater, Miss Skinner will offer a week of her two major creations, augmented by shorter monologues and sketches.

The two major creations, of course, are "The Empress Eugenie," never before presented in the Capital, and "The Wives of Henry VIII," seen here briefly last year. The former will be the principal offering at the Saturday matinee and every night but Friday. For Friday night and Wednesday matinee, "The Wives" will be the piece de resistance of the bill.

In the film houses, the New Year a enticements will be after this fashion: Earle, Ruth Chatterton in "Frisco Jenny," and Block & Sully headlining the vaudeville bill; RKO-Keith's, Leslie Howard and Ann Harding in "The Animal Kingdom;" Loew's Fox, William Haines and Madge Evans in "Fast Life," and Belle Baker headlining the vaudeville; Columbia, Sally Blane and Randolph Scott in "Heritage of the Desert;" Palace, Norma Shearer and Clark Gable in "Strange Interlude;" Metropolitan, Edward G. Robinson in "Silver Dollar," second week; Rialto, following Boris Karloff in "The Mummy," "Slim" Summerville and ZaSu Pitts in "They Just Had to Get Married."

The presentation of Ruth Chatterton in "Frisco Jenny" at the Earle, beginning tomorrow, is announced as a world premiere. The story is a stirring tale of the Barbary Coast, when it was running at its height in the days of the quake twenty-five years ago. And Washington gets first peek!

Under plans now being laid by Mine Host Peter Borras, the New Year will be started off high, wide and handsome at the Madrillon on New Year's Eve. Headed by Jimmy Ray, the Madrillon floor show will be augmented by a number of new acts imported from New York especially for this gala occasion. Herb Gordon and his orchestra and Chef Maggia will do the rest!

As if any one ever heard of any such thing as rest on New Year's Eve!

Bicentennial Marker Unveiled at Marlboro

A Bicentennial marker, to be erected in Marlboro where George Washington used to stop on his journeys between Mount Vernon and Annapolis, was unveiled yesterday in the courthouse in Marlboro by Mrs. Frank P. Scrivener, Mrs. Clarence M. Roberts and Miss Polly Brooke. Later the marker will be erected near the Crain highway monumnt.

Th tablet was accepted for the county by C. C. Magruder, chairman of the county Bicentennial committee. Other addresses were made by J. Alexis Shriver, chairman of the State committee on county celebrations; J. Spence Howard and Dr. Arthur B. Bibbins, acting chairman of the State Bicentennial Commission.

THE PARADINE CASE

By ROBERT HICHENS

SYNOPSIS.

Sir Malcolm Keane, K. C., is asked by Sir Simon Flaquer, a noted English solicitor, to defend Mrs. Paradine, who has been arrested for the murder of her husband, blind war hero. Mrs. Paradine, a beautiful Dane, had been rescued from a life of degradation in Copenhagen by an American diplomat, taken as a servant to America and later made her way to England, where she married Maj. Paradine after the war. He agrees to handle the case.

Sir Malcolm is happily married to Gay, but when he calls on Mrs. Paradine at Holloway Jail he feels the strange fascination of his beautiful client. He is worried because Lord Horfield might be named as judge of the trial and endeavors to be friendly to him. He and Gay give a little dinner party to which they ask Lord and Lady Horfield. After the party Sir Malcolm studies a photograph of William Marsh, Col. Paradine's valet, and the idea occurs to him that the man who acted in so intimate a relation to his blind master might have had an opportunity to kill him. His plan of defense begins to take form in his mind.

Gay meets a Swedish painter, Baron Sedelsward, at the Flaquers' and he invites her to a private view of his paintings. Sir Malcolm decides to go to the exhibition when he learns that Sedelsward was acquainted with Mrs. Paradine. He asks the painter to dine with him that night.

Judy Flaquer, Gay's friend, suspects that Sir Malcolm is neglecting Gay because of his abnormal interest in his client. Lady Horfield also warns Keane to "look out" for his wife. Keane decides to leave London to further study his defense of Mrs. Paradine.

Before leaving, Lady Horfield intimates her husband delights in conviction of defendants on trial before him. Their meetings is ended abruptly by Judge Horfield, in whom Keane detects a spirit of antagonism. After refusing to take Gay with him, he goes to Hindley Village, where he encounters Marsh at the Paradine home: Marsh, animal-like and surly.

Returning to his inn after an inspection of the mansion, Keane is surprised by a visit from Marsh.

GAY had large eyes, and, though she was shortsighted except when occasionally she peered, she had not the blind look some shortsighted people have. Her eyes were kind and soft and very intelligent, but occasionally they sent out a long gaze of scrutiny. And when they did that it was as if all her soul were gathered together in inquiry, deep and earnest inquiry. Keane knew that gaze well and had loved it. There was something childlike and amazingly unself-conscious in it that had often touched him, had made him want to put his arms around Gay and shelter her from all the attacking troubles and misfortunes of life. But now he saw a new expression in Gay's eyes, and it was not unself-conscious, not inquiring. There was surely something negative in it, something like an almost furtive refusal. Her eyes seemed to be saying to him, "No, no, don't!"

And they fell before his eyes.

"What has happened to Gay?" he thought.

He could not imagine what it might be, but instinctively he connected it with Mrs. Paradine, and a fierce curiosity bristled in him. While he had been away Gay had done something, or had been involved in something, which was connected with the Paradine case and which, therefore, must affect him. And she did not want him to know or to suspect what it was.

"What have you been doing while I've been away, dear?" he asked, trying for a casual tone of voice, but keeping his eyes on her, anxious to surprise any fleeting sign of disturbance or confusion.

She told him, mentioning various small circumstances.

"That all?"

"The first night you were away, after the journey night I dined with the Horfields," she said.

"Really?" he said, surprised. "How was that? A sudden engagement, wasn't it?"

"Yes. Lady Horfield rang me up the morning after you left and said that as she knew I was alone, would I dine with them and go to the Adelphi Theater. They had a box. I accepted, as I had nothing else."

"Was it pleasant?"

"Quite pleasant."

"Somehow I can't see you perched up in a box by the side of Lady Horfield."

Gay didn't speak for an instant, but then she said in a curiously inexpressive voice:

"Lady Horfield didn't come to the theater."

"Not come! But I thought they asked you expressly because they were going."

"So they did. But when dinner was over she felt suddenly unwell. It seems she suffers from blood pressure. And she had to lie down. She lay on a sofa in the drawing room and we waited a while hoping her malaise would pass. She had vertigo. But as she didn't feel better quickly she insisted on our going without her."

"Oh! So you passed the evening alone with Horfield."

"Yes. He was very entertaining."

"Was he? Well, now I'll be off and have a bath. I have a lot of things to do today."

He went out of the room.

His valet was running the bath. After the railway journey he looked forward to it—a hot bath, but not too hot. He would stay in it for ten minutes, losing some of the fatigue of a sleepless night in the train. He undressed and stepped into the water.

His short interview with Gay had left him strangely disturbed.

Suddenly the note from Sir Simon, which he had just memorized recurred to his memory: "I want to talk to you about the best line to take with Horfield. We must be very careful not to put his back up. I have met him twice within the last three days and thought he seemed in a rather extraordinary mood. I'll explain what I mean when we meet."

Instantly he connected that statement with what Gay had just told him. He must without fail see Sir Simon that day.

The best line to take with Horfield! Careful not to get his back up. And he loathed the man, and moreover had one of those naturally expressive faces that are apt to show feeling with too much sincerity. When he was off guard. But Horfield had said he would have made a good actor if he had not become a barrister. Well, he must prove his powers as an actor and on the very man who had made that statement.

Soon after ten Keane went down to his chambers. A little before twelve he telephoned to Bewly place. The reply came that Sir Simon was at the law courts concerned in a case, but was expected to be in Bewly place for an hour or two after 4 o'clock. Keane telephoned that he would be there at five.

Alfred Flaquer was with his father going through some documents with him, but got up at once on seeing Keane, and after greeting him went away.

"How's Alfred shaping?" asked Keane, to say something.

"Not badly. I hope some day he'll be able to take my place without wrecking the firm. Sit down, Keane. Smoke if you like."

"No, thanks."

"Had a satisfactory trip?"

"Well, I wanted to—shall I say imbibe? Yes, imbibe some of the atmosphere of Mrs. Paradine's northern home, and to study the case under its influence. And I was able to do that."

"Ah!" said Sir Simon.

For a moment he seemed to be waiting, but Keane added nothing. Before coming to Bewly place he had made up his mind that he was not going to tell Sir Simon that he had met and talked with William Marsh. He felt certain that Sir Simon would entirely disapprove of that interview and would only be irritated, perhaps painfully vexed, to hear it.

"And so you have come back satisfied?" said Sir Simon after a pause.

"I'm glad I went. The sea air has done me good. Wild weather up there, but I wanted it. And now the great ordeal is getting near. No more holidays till the verdict is given."

He forced himself to speak briskly and confidently.

"And so you wanted to talk to me about Horfield."

"Yes."

"Anything wrong with him? You wrote of finding him in a rather extraordinary mood. What does that portend?"

Sir Simon looked down at his large flat writing table for a moment, then, keeping his eyes fixed on it, said in a low voice:

"You and I both know that Horfield doesn't, though he's a judge, lead what is sometimes called a very straight life."

"Agreed!" said Keane, wondering.

"I have known him for an immense number of years, and I know a good deal about him—a good deal more than he has probably any idea that I know. I won't go into that. Every man has a right to his own life. But so far as any situation or event in Horfield's private life is likely to have a repercussion on our case, this Paradine case, we are, I think, bound to take notice of it."

"Of course!" said Keane with increasing astonishment. "But has anything——"

"One minute! Between you and me Horfield's troubles in life have almost invariably come about through his secret preoccupation with women. He's a man, as you know, who seems as cold as ice and whose complete self-possession strikes every one who comes in contact with him. One would doubt his having a heart. It is certain, however, that few men of his age are so governed by the desires of the flesh. And when he is so governed and his desires can not be fulfilled—that is, if he meets with resistance when he has been captivated, in his ugly way of being captivated—the reaction on his mind and it almost seems on his whole nature is extreme. He goes sour, Keane. That's the best expression for it. The whole man goes sour. Something of the kind has happened just lately. And Horfield has gone sour. That's bad for those near him. That's bad, I'm afraid, for us. The fact that a judge is suffering from suppressed gout has made many a sentence far more severe than it need have been. Men and women have served, en masse, years in prison because of such trifling causes. You will say that there is the right of appeal. Granted! But it's sometimes difficult to find a strictly legal reason to upset a sentence even though it seems cruel. Better the sentence should never have been pronounced than that one should have to lodge an appeal against it. You're with me there?"

"Of course."

"Well, now we are up against the fact that Horfield, for some reason that I am positive is connected with a woman, is in this abominable condition, suffering no doubt himself and so longing to make others suffer."

Keane looked hard at Sir Simon wondering wheher he had the faintest suspicion that Horfield was a Sadist.

"Have you," he said slowly, "any idea at all as to who the woman is?"

Sir Simon raised his keen eyes from the writing table.

"I have had no indication from Horfield as to who she is. But it's quite enough for me that there is a woman who is troubling his life just at this, for us, psychological moment. And for this reason—don't think I'm being supersubtle—it is singularly unfortunate that our client is a woman."

"Why so?"

"He is in the sort of condition, I fear, which might lead him to pay one woman out for his—shall we say ill success—with another."

At that moment Keane remembered the curious and subtle resemblance that Mrs. Paradine bore to Gay. And a dark cloud seemed to be forming mysteriously around him. Without making any comment on this remark of Sir Simon, just because it had penetrated so cruelly into his mind, he said:

"I take what you tell me for granted, relying on your long experience of Horfield. Now I should like to hear your views as to what you called in your note to me the best line to take with him."

"I'll give them for what they are worth."

Sir Simon continued speaking for about five minutes. Keane sat listening attentively. He was schooling his face. No changing vivid expressions flitted across it. On the contrary, it looked heavy and almost glum because of his effort. When Sir Simon stopped speaking Keane said:

"I see. I grasp fully what you wish; what you advise."

"I'm sure you do. I think it's important for us to avoid, so far of course as we can, everything that might tend to ruffle Horfield. No one," he smiled slightly, "can be more charming, more winning than you when you wish to be delightful. Horfield is more susceptible to manner, more sensitive even altogether, I believe, than he seemed to be. And so——" He lifted his hands in an expressive and very un-English gesture.

"Lady Horfield over again!" thought Keane, remembering her fantastic injunction to him to charm Horfield.

"I'll do what I can," he said.

They sat for a moment in silence. It seemed that what was necessary to say had been said. Yet Keane did not get up to go. And at last Sir Simon asked:

"Haven't you anything to tell me?"

At that moment Keane was debating whether he ought to tell Sir Simon of the black suspicion about Mrs. Paradine and Marsh which came to him in the north. Could the telling of it do any good to the case? His own feeling, of course, was intensely set against speaking of it. In fact, it would be torture to him to mention it. Nevertheless, if the fact of Sir Simon, with his keen legal intellect, knowing of it could in any way help the defense Keane knew that it was his absolute duty to speak. Knowing it, Sir Simon might possibly make some acute suggestion that would help in the conduct of the defense. But wouldn't it be a deadly sin against Mrs. Paradine to speak?

"I don't know that I have," he said slowly, and still quite uncertain whether he would speak or not.

He got up, but as if with some hesitation, from his chair and said goodby.

As he went into Bewly place he said to himself:

"I can't tell him, ever. It's too foul! And besides, I don't believe it. No, I don't believe it!"

Gay must be the woman whom Sir Simon had not named, but of whom he had spoken.

If this was so, and Keane definitely assumed it as fact, a new and dreadful complication had been introduced into the Paradine case. And it would be a dangerous one for Mrs. Paradine.

That cursed physical resemblance betwene her and Gay, even that might now do her harm.

For a moment it seemed to Keane as if the stars in their courses were fighting against her and him. A feeling of desperation came over him. It was mingled with a feeling of dreadful curiosity.

He had left Bewly place on foot. The snow was still falling and there was a fog, though not a dense fog, feeling its way through the town. He walked slowly and presently he was standing at the foot of the broad flight of steps that led to the wide portico of the Cleveland Club.

Kean went into the club. There were men he knew in the hall, but Horfield was not among them. He left his outdoor things in the coat-room and mounted the broad staircase to the first floor.

In a far corner he saw the figure of a man sunk in an armchair, his thin arms spread out on its arms, his long fingers holding their edges, motionless as a corpse, his eyes apparently bent down and gazing at the carpet. It was Horfield, alone, apart, either meditating profoundly or perhaps dozing certainly in either case, not observant of his surroundings. Indeed, Keane had the impression that he was entirely unconscious of them. His narrow pale face, his long and narrow but intellectual head showed in the dancing light, but the lamps behind him were extinguished. No one was near him. Keane sat quite still looking at him.

In a moment the waiter brought the tea. Keane dealt with it cautiously, trying to make no noise. He was enticed by that motionless figure and wanted to go on observing it.

Now he had made up his mind that Horfield was wide awake and that his eyes were open but concealed by the drooping lids. He did not know why he was sure of that, but he was sure. There was something definitely sleepless about the still figure. The face looked malicious. He remembered that phrase of Sir Simon. "Horfield has gone sour."

He got up and walked slowly toward the fire.

As he drew near to Horfield he saw that the thin lips were smiling and, before he came up to him the clear silvery voice said:

"I was wondering whether you were trying to give me the cut direct."

He stretched out his hand. Keane was obliged to clasp it.

"I wasn't certain whether you saw me, though you seemed to be looking at me."

"I was looking at you," said Horfield. "Is this too near the fire for you?"

"No."

Keane sat down. Now he must prove whether, as Horfield had said, he had the power to be a good actor. He had now, he felt sure, an additional reason for detesting this man, but he had a tremendous reason for entirely concealing his detestation. And that reason must, for the present, be preeminent. Later, perhaps, he could hate in the open. Later, when fate had cast the die.

"You're soon back," said Horfield. "Did you have a successful journey?"

He asked the question without curiosity, in the casual way of society.

"O, yes," said Keane in much the same tone. "By the way, how's your wife?" Gay told me she was taken suddenly ill and was obliged to give up the theater."

"O, it was nothing," said Horfield, with a faint smile. "Dear thing! She will eat what she knows won't agree with her—shellfish, peaches, nuts. My wife has few faults, but she's a wee bit greedy. But so are most of us. In her condition she ought to be more strict with herself. However, I was hardly a sufferer, for I had your delightful wife to myself for once. You know my feeling for her. I think her the most charming person in London."

"She told me you were very entertaining," said Keane, with simplicity.

"Entertaining, did she?" said Horfield.

And just for an instant it seemed to Keane that he lost control of his voice. Its smooth and eminently melodious timber was marred by an edge of sharpness.

"Yes, you always amuse her. And though she's so quiet and often so serious she has a very strong sense of humor, thank goodness."

And then they talked about sense of humor.

While they talked it occurred to Keane that there was a way by which he would probably be able to find out definitely whether what he suspected had occurred between Horfield and Gay. And he resolved to take it. For it was vitally important to him to know whether the danger Mrs. Paradine stood in had been increased since he had been out of London by any conduct of Gay's.

Park of Everglades Inspected by Wilbur

Miami, Fla., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Ray Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior, today discussed with representatives of local organizations the progress being made toward having Everglades Tropical Park, south of here, made a national institution.

"I am here to see what I hope will be one of our great national parks," the Secretary said, as he advocated establishment of the park as a national affair.

Pantages' Daughter Gets Alimony.

Los Angeles, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Under an agreement entered into today in the Superior Court, Orlando Martin, orchestra leader, will pay temporary alimony of $100 a month to Mrs. Margaret Martin, adopted daughter of Alexander Pantages, theater magnate, who has sued him for divorce on grounds of cruelty. Mrs. Martin is known on the stage as Dixie Martin.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

PREVENTION OF RHEUMATIC FEVER.

BASED upon evidence that acute rheumatic fever is a contagious disease caused by a hemolytic streptococcus, and having three stages, the following methods of control of this form of rheumatism have been suggested by a group of outstanding British physicians:

1. Bacterial examinations of all cases of sore throat for hemolytic streptococci. In the past the practice has been to examine such cases for diphtheria bacillus, and not to pay much attention to the streptococci. Diphtheria, thanks principally to vaccination, is becoming a disease of minor importance. Streptococci in the throat will soon be if they are not now of more importance than the diphtheria bacillus.

2. If the patient lives or works in a place where there is much opportunity for exposure, the throats of contacts should be examined for the same coccus.

3. If the season is bad, the quarters are crowded, many of the contacts show the same coccus, or there is a history of a tendency to rheumatism, a skin test for sensitization to hemolytic streptococci endotoxins should be made.

4. The skin tests are simple. They can be made by any physician. The tested man need not stop work.

5. If the skin test shows that the man is sensitized to streptococci, he should be desensitized by methods approved and carried out by physicians. The method is known as the Swift method.

6. If the surroundings are such as make for the disease thew should be improved. The changes especially to be considered are decreased overcrowding, spacing beds, discontinuing the use of articles used in common, improving ventilation, lessening exposure to dampness and cold.

7. If it be found that a considerable number of people to whom the man is exposed have hemolytic streptococci in their throats, efforts to overcome this condition should be made.

8. Rheumatism of this type and the sore throat and fever which preceded the joint symptoms should be systematically treated by some of the salicylate group of medicines from the beginning of the disorder. This method some physicians know as the Schlesinger method.

9. If the significance of the preliminary attack is appreciated that disease will be treated in a way that will protect against what may follow. So far as the sore throat of itself is concerned cure is easy. Not only is this disease to be cured but the possibility of sensitization, and of a second exposure through overcrowding, bad ventilation, and bad environment are to be given consideration.

Culbertson on Bridge

By ELY CULBERTSON

DUPLICATE PLAY.

THERE are probably more people playing Duplicate Bridge throughout the country today than played either Duplicate or Rubber Bridge five years ago. The reason for the great popularity of this type of divertisement is easily understood. It takes the game of Contract, where skill is already at a premium, and places it at an even greater premium. In short, the Duplicate player is practically never the victim of bad cards, because he knows that no matter how worthless a holding he has, there will be some one else at every other table holding this identical hand at some time or other and that he will not be at any disadvantage.

Duplicate Bridge is not the same game as regular Rubber Bridge. The rules, of course, are the same; the scoring is almost identical, but the tactics of the players differ somewhat. The part-score, of course, is nonexistent at Duplicate, as far as making a game on the combination of two separate hands is concerned. Therefore, the necessity at Duplicate of trying to bid the opponents up to protect part-scores is not nearly so imperative.

On the other hand, when playing in a Duplicate game which is being scored on a match-point basis—which method is becoming more and more prevalent—overtricks, which are of negligible importance at money Bridge, rise to great proportions when the Duplicate board is being scored. In other words, a "top" on a board is a "top" whether you beat the next team on this particular board by 35 points or by 600 points.

Strangely enough, those tactics which will win for the good player in the long run at Rubber Bridge will prove equally successful at Duplicate. In regular Rubber play, that player who is conservative without being too conservative and who is steadier than his opponents will probably win in the long run. Similarly, in Duplicate play the steady, even colorless player who does not try to create a big swing on every board, but who merely is content to play for averages, will get the top scores—that is, assuming he is a sound bidder and good card player. In other words, by playing for average he will very rarely fall below average and will get a good score every time one of the opponents slips the least bit. That super-brilliant player who is continually looking for swings and is playing for top or bottom on each board will probably divide up his tops and bottoms and get about half of each, which, of course, at the end of the evening's play, will only give him an average score.

In Rubber play the good player will make an effort to play any reasonably close hand at game, realizing the percentage of taking a small loss if his contract is defeated, against a big gain if he fulfills the contract and wins the rubber premium. In Duplicate play—particularly match-point play—tactics of this sort will not pay as well. In other words, if you bid three close hands to game and make one of them, you are more than rewarded while playing money Bridge; in a match-point Duplicate game, however, you will have two bad scores and only one good score and the percentage naturally is not there.

Sound Approach bidding, followed by careful and accurate Dummy play and defense, will even more highly repay the user at Duplicate Bridge than at money Bridge.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

The bidding and play of the hand printed below will be discussed tomorrow:

C. & O. Train Plunges Into Virginia Landslide

Covington, Va., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—A westbound Chesapeake & Ohio passenger train plunged into a landslide near here today and was delayed two hours.

The tumbling earth, attributed to recent freezes which were followed by heavy snowfall and torrential rains, slipped down upon the track. The forward wheels of the locomotive left the rails as the engine burrowed into the earth. Another locomotive was substituted and the train started west on the eastbound track. The accident occurred betwene Covington and Allegheny Station, at a point near Moss Run.

Crying Is Equal Between Sexes.

Berkeley, Calif., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Crying honors are even between the babes of both sexes. Observation of 61 crying babies, 31 boys and 30 girls, convinced University of California experimenters that there is no choice. Both squall the least at the age of about 4 months.

Rickenbacker's War Mechanic Dead at 47

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Dec. 28.—Thomas Johnson, 47, former Clarksburg citizen, who served in the World War as mechanic with Capt. Rickenbacker, noted aviator, died last night in a Government hospital at Perryville, N. C., according to word received here by relatives. War injuries caused him to be paralyzed and he had been a hospital patient for several years.

Surviving are his wife, two brothers and two sisters. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery. Johnson was one of the first automobile mechanics in West Virginia.

Veterans Elect Connecticut Man.

Oconomowoc, Wis., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—National headquarters of the Mexican Border Veterans Association announced today that Francis J. Shearer, of Hartford, Conn., has been elected commander in chief of the organization for 1933. The vote was taken by mail.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

Slightly military in effect is this taupe gray woolen dress with crossed incrustations fashioning an important part of the silhouette. Steel cut buttons finish the trimming effect. (A Dak-ray design.)

ANOTHER problem faces the well-dressed woman. Not only has she to decide upon her type, select the styles, materials, silhouettes which best suit both her type and her figure, experiment and use the utmost care in the selection of her colors, but now she has to effect certain things in her wardrobe and be consistent throughout!

Think of the variety, just "por ejamplo" in evening gowns. The slender, fairly or comparatively short, and fairly high cut decolletage of the evening gown sponsored by such couturieres as Patou and Molyneux, and the elaborate, formal, possibly draped, certainly decollete, and instep covering evening gown of many of the other of the Haute Couture. Right there Miladi is faced with an important decision. Because she simply can not indulge in both types of gown, unless she has unlimited means for completing each ensemble with the same type of wrap, shoes, gloves, &c.

See the point? And the same is true of daytime dress wear, particularly noticeable in the direction of sleeves. If you adopt the fancy sleeve on your gown, after due consideration and decision as to its becomingness to yourself, your coats have to follow suit—be ample as to sleeves, or belled or shaped in such a way as to conform with the type of gown that is worn beneath them. Then presto, hats, gloves, accessories must be suitably and similarly softened, if not actually puffed.

Whilst if you decide for the slender and svelt line in your frocks, and the long, tight, and muchly button-trimmed sleeve, your coats, too, show plain and slender sleeves—which call for slenderness in the rest of the garment, and elegance of a more severe type in accessories.

One just doesn't wear all the varieties accessible in today's mode, unless one's wardrobe be a hodge podge of a lot of quite stylish things which result in a disappointing effect. Maybe that's what's the matter with your wardrobe right now! Fly to the closet and just see!

* * * *

Just to prove the rule by the exception, I have designed for you today a dress which incorporates two definite aspects of the mode—the severe and elegant one, and the more feminine and graceful one. The crossing of the slightly military looking incrustations for instance, which "form" the garment, might belie the softness of the longer at one side skirt drape as well as the slight puff of the sleeve. This is the kind of dress one could wear almost from morn to eve—with a fur piece and no coat, if the weather permitted. Like it?

Little dainty things that all women love are in this week's leaflet all ready for you to make or have your dressmaker or maid make for you. Even if you don't need them all, spare finger time is best occupied in this way, and these dainty and novel little things can be put away for the time when you need to make a gift of some sort. Last minute gift that you can give even yet—you know, 'tis New Year's and not Christmas when gifts are distributed in many countries! So send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this leaflet, and put it away for another time if you are too busy this week to make the things in it.

And in the circle is sketched a dainty starched lawn set with a bright red or green velvet ribbon holding it in place—to be worn with a black afternoon dress. An idea? Especially the wristlet worn with the short sleeves of the dress, I think.

Daughter smartly coated!
Isn't it a cute model?

The deep round shoulder yoke makes it so distinctive. And it has a two-way neckline. It may be worn buttoned close to the neck or opened and rolled in revers as in miniature view.

A brown tweed mixture made the original.

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

SPARKLING lights, sparkling wit, sparkling women! On with gayety. Ring out the old, ring in the new. The young king brings such golden promises with him; promises of prosperity and a higher standard of beauty in all things. So let your loveliest self usher him in.

The Luxury Loving.

For "them as has" and can indulge their love of luxury, a few hours spent in a reliable beauty salon will help boost your beauty as well as spirit.

First—a facial. Sink back in a comfortable chair, tell yourself you're going to relax every nerve and fiber, let the deft fingers of the expert operator mold, pat, lift, slap, stimulate your circulation, make your skin glow and your eyes sparkle, apply make-up deftly and send you forth looking glamorous.

Then—your hair. A scalp massage, perhaps an oil treatment, then a shampoo, a color rinse if you wish, to high light the beauty beams that the world seldom sees dancing there, then a setting. Let a master artist do that for you. And a new coiffure just for the occasion is not amiss. Why not one of the intricate and intriguing sculptured arrangements, with ringlets or twists? Wear a jeweled clip in your hair if your coiffure and costume are not too elaborate.

A manicure—to hand you beauty as well as peace of mind. No ragged cuticle edge, no streaks or missing patches in the polish.

Home, and a warm, relaxing bath with bath salts or scented powder added, or perhaps a toilet water in your bath. Or, a toilet water rub afterward. Delightful. An hour's nap with a net or cloth protecting your hair so it will not become disarranged. Keep it on while you dress. Change your make-up if you need to. Then comb and pinch your hair into place. Ready for a happy evening? I hope it will be.

Home Treatments.

If you can not have the treatments in a salon, give them to yourself at home. Fix your nails, following the same procedure that a manicurist would. My hand bulletins will tell you how. Then, if you have time for an oil treatment, followed after several hours by a shampoo, fine; otherwise, if your hair needs it, merely shampoo. Pinch and set your hair in place while wet. Adjust a [illegible] net over the coiffure. Let it dry naturally. Combine bath with beautifying facial, cleansing the skin before bath, then applying a nourishing cream, which leave on during bath. After the bath, remove cream and finish with iced skin tonic patting. Take your nap. After the nap apply a finishing lotion. One of the powdery lotions is especially appropriate for back, hands, arms, neck and shoulders, as well as face. Make up. Dress. You probably look lovely. Ready for gayety. Start the new year beautifully.

I have bulletins on home care of the hair, a complete outline of the home facial, and bulletins on hand care. A self-addressed envelope is necessary for each set.

What Today Means

"CAPRICORN."

IF December 29 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:40 a. m. to 9:30 a. m., from 11 a. m. to 12 noon, and from 7 p. m. to 8 p. m. The danger periods are from 2 p. m. to 3:15 p. m. and from 9:40 p. m. to 10:30 p. m.

Influences operating on this December 29th will seem to bring all activity to a standstill. You may even have the feeling that you are losing ground, and that schemes and plans of yours instead of progressing are disintegrating. Look on this day as a testing time, and carry on more strenuously than ever. Right activity in the right direction can not fail to win.

The child born on this December 29th will be a playful little one, easily amused, and one who can early be trusted by himself. These children should do well in school for they possess splendid mental equipment. Look for them to make places for themselves in this life.

Born on December 29th you are a generous and unselfish person, never taking thought for your own comfort, always working for the good of others. You are a person of great moral and spiritual strength. People turn to you for help, but seldom do they try to take advantage of you. You are honest, straightforward, understanding, forgiving and loving. You would seem to have a message to give to the world. You would go far in the ministry or in any type of work wherein you could devote your efforts to benefitting mankind.

If December 29th is your birthday, you are a person who is held in high respect and esteem by those who work for you, as well as by those with whom you come in contact in business dealings. You are inclined to be a bit backward about pushing yourself. Do not stay too much in the background. The world needs people like you and you belong out in the swirling currents and eddies of life. You are constantly seeking to express yourself in some artistic form. You should be able to write. If you do not yourself play some instrument, at least you derive much pleasure and enjoyment from hearing good music. If you are to advance yourself far in this more or less turbulent world you will probably find it necessary to cultivate a slight degree of worldliness. You have many friends.

Successful people born on December 29:

John C. B. Davis, lawyer and diplomat.

John J. Ingalls, politician and author.

George H. Smillie, artist.

John Vance Cheney, poet and librarian.

William T. Sedgwick, biologist.

Beware of Colds NOW!

With Flu in the Air Colds Are Doubly Dangerous

Colds—always treacherous—are doubly dangerous now, with flu reported in many sections. They lower body strength and pave the way for flu and all its serious complications. Heed even the slightest sniffle as a danger signal. It's no time to take chances.

The safest course to follow is that outlined in Vicks Plan for better Control-of-Colds. In clinical tests last winter, Vicks Plan reduced the number and spread of colds by half!—cut their dangers and costs more than half! Full details of the plan are in each Vicks package. Briefly, it is this:

TO PREVENT MANY COLDS: At that first feeling of stuffiness or nasal irritation, sniffle or sneeze—Nature's usual warning that a cold is coming on—use Vicks Nose & Throat Drops, the new aid in preventing colds. Vicks Drops aid Nature in throwing off the infection that threatens. They prevent development of many colds.

TO END A COLD SOONER: If a cold has developed or strikes without warning, vigorous measures are necessary. At bedtime, apply Vicks VapoRub. Its direct double action—continuing through the night—brings quicker relief. During the day, use the convenient Vicks Nose Drops every few hours as needed. They add to comfort—help to shorten the cold.

SELECTING A SPEAKER.

The Democratic contest over the Speakership involves many considerations affecting the public interest. It is a powerful post, not only in regard to the shaping of legislation, but in regard to party policy. An able Speaker can mend or mar his party's chances to hold or capture the Presidency and the Senate, as well as the House. When the White House is occupied by a President belonging to his own party, the Speaker should be one of the most powerful agencies in the administration.

The House after March 4 will contain 313 Democrats, of whom 116 will hail from the North, 93 from the South, 54 from the West, and 50 from the border States. The South is much stronger in the House than its numbers indicate, as it holds 26 of the 47 committee chairmanships, including all the important ones. This situation has given rise to a demand for a realignment in order to give the North and West a better share of influence. Mr. Rainey, of Illinois, Democratic leader, claims to have obtained a majority of members committed to his cause in the race for the Speakership, but his two rivals, Messrs. Byrns of Tennessee and McDuffie of Alabama, do not concede this advantage. Questions of floor leadership and chairmanships of important committees are involved in the Speakership contest. In some quarters it is suggested that Mr. Rainey could give best service as chairman of the ways and means committee, to which he is entitled. Mr. Byrns, as chairman of appropriations, has demonstrated fine qualities as a composer of differences. Mr. McDuffie, Democratic whip, has the support of Speaker Garner.

New men, entirely unacquainted with the House, will take their places as members on March 4. They are being asked to pledge themselves in advance to this or that candidate for Speaker. If they are prudent they will withhold their pledges until they can study the situation. The Democratic caucus probably will not be held until just before March 4. There is plenty of time for consideration of candidates, and matters may develop during this session which will have a bearing upon the choice for Speaker.

Mr. Byrns has renewed the suggestion that a steering committee be created to direct the policy of the House. It is a good proposal, especially in view of the fact that the Democratic majority will be unwieldy. A Speaker possessing solid qualities, supported by a steering committee representing all sections of the country, would be an ideal arrangement, enabling the House to function effectively and avoiding sectional grievances.

Upon the wise selection of a Speaker will depend in large measure the success of the incoming administration.

THE FIVE-DAY WEEK BILL.

Hearings will begin next week before a Senate subcommittee on a bill by Senator Black to make the five-day week and the six-hour day compulsory in American industry. The Black bill would forbid the shipment in interstate commerce of goods produced in mines, factories, mills, etc., in which employes are "permitted to work more than five days in any week or more than six hours in any day".

The constitutionality of Senator Black's proposal is open to serious question. The fundamental law specifically forbids the States to pass "any law impairing the obligation of contracts". Congress is given no authority by which it may abridge the individual's right to sell his services. Since all rights not specifically granted to Congress are reserved to the States, and this particular right is denied the States, the Supreme Court would doubtless invalidate such a law if Congress should be unwise enough to pass it.

Labor should be first to oppose such a measure. Workingmen are in favor of shorter hours, but they ought not to surrender their right to work as long as they please. The right of labor unions to bargain with employers as to wages and hours of labor has been dearly won. It ought not to be abridged by Congress. No assembly of savants on Capitol Hill can fix a labor period that can meet the requirements of all industries and guarantee to workmen the maintenance of a high standard of living.

It is probable that the legitimate needs and wants of the people could not be supplied in normal times if all employes were restricted to the five-day week and the six-hour day. An arbitrary limit upon working hours would therefore limit the economic advance of the Nation. The problem of distributing available goods on a more equitable basis can not be solved by restricting the individual's right to produce, and thereby limiting his power to consume.

Shorter hours are being introduced into industrial systems as the result of hard times. Continued development along this line may be expected as man's productivity increases. The need is for more flexible working hours, so that production could be checked when a surplus accumulates and accelerated when there is a shortage. Any attempt on the part of Congress to fix working hours would be a step in the wrong direction, even though shorter hours at present are desirable.

PRACTICAL COOPERATION.

A sudden flare of partisanship on Capitol Hill disturbs the holiday tranquillity of Washington. Senator Robinson accuses President Hoover, who is inoffensively if unsuccessfully fishing in Florida waters, of "partisan political obstruction." The senator from Arkansas fears that the President may veto some Democratic legislation. Without waiting to see if his fears are warranted, he makes an effort to place responsibility for the prospective extra session after March 4 upon Mr. Hoover.

The desire of the Democratic party to avoid an extra session next spring can be well understood. An avalanche of extremely difficult problems will be precipitated upon the new Congress. The Democratic party will be in full control of the House, the Senate and the White House. It must assume responsibility for balancing the budget, settling the war debts question, liquidating prohibition, providing relief for the farmer, revising the tariff and cooperating with other nations in the stabilization of exchanges and commodity prices. It is quite natural that the Democrats in Congress should be anxious to dispose of some of these issues while a nominal Republican Senate and a Republican President still share responsibility with them.

President Hoover has shown his willingness to cooperate in solving the most difficult problems confronting the Government. He invited President-elect Roosevelt to join in a movement to review the war debts, and he urged Congress to balance the budget by enacting new revenue legislation and reducing expenditures. Early in the week it appeared that the Democratic leaders in the House would join in an effort to balance the budget. But reports that Gov. Roosevelt is opposed to a sales tax leave little hope that the 1934 budget can be balanced at this session.

It is inconceivable that a purely Democratic program could be enacted with a Republican President still in the White House. The President's duty to veto legislation which he regards as prejudicial to the national welfare is not suspended merely because his successor has been chosen. It is somewhat far-fetched to accuse the administration of obstructive tactics because it has not swung around to the Democratic viewpoint. Any senator who is experienced in legislative matters might take it for granted that the questions about which the two parties fought in November could not be settled in December, January and February on a non-partisan basis in a left-over Congress.

The most secure foundation that could be laid for the incoming administration would be a balanced budget. Both parties are committed to that non-partisan objective. Both admit that a beer bill will not be sufficient to make up the deficit. If the House of Representatives would cooperate to balance the budget real progress could be made, and no time would be lost in jockeying for political advantage.

SPOILS OF VICTORY.

Chairman Farley's encouraging message to waiting Democrats that there were 150,000 jobs ready for the faithful appears to be a somewhat exaggerated estimate of the number of political plums that will be available as Federal patronage. A more exact analysis places the positions that are not under civil service protection, and which can be filled during the next presidential term, at slightly more than 117,000.

These positions range all the way from Cabinet posts and ambassadorships to minor postmasters and doorkeepers. About 17,000 are classified as presidential patronage, including the postoffice and diplomatic selections. The remaining 100,000 appointments are distributed by the various Federal department heads, judges, congressmen and officials. They are legitimate political spoils, since they can be filled by arbitrary appointment without the necessity of civil service examinations.

The total number of Federal civil service employes, as shown by President Campbell's latest report, is 578,231. Of these 467,161 are secure in their positions because they were appointed only after taking competitive examinations. This leaves 111,070 who, while they may have been obliged to take some competency tests, are not included in the permanent service lists. In addition to those employed in the executive branch there are some 4,000 replaceable employes of the judicial branch and about 2,500 in the legislative branch.

The great bulk of Federal appointments is made by members of the Cabinet. The largest group comprises the first, second and third class postmasters, 15,650 in all. All postmasters are appointed for terms of four years, so that the entire list is not available for new incumbents on March 4, but offices must be filled as terms expire throughout the next four years. Due to the refusal of the Senate to consider nominations recently made, there will be a number of vacancies when the new administration takes office. The political importance of the position of Postmaster General is indicated by the customary appointment of party campaign managers to the post. There is a general belief that Chairman Farley will be given this assignment.

The more important executive appointments that are made with the approval of the Senate include fifteen ambassadors, thirty-seven ministers to foreign countries, eleven members of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and members of numerous boards and commissions. Then there are ninety United States Attorneys and ninety marshals and sixty-four collectors of internal revenue. In addition to the jobs that have been listed in the foregoing totals the postmasters themselves distribute about 60,000 more, and in like proportion most of the other appointees make selection of their minor assistants. Nearly 50,000 part-time workers are divided among the various government departments in Washington, and in service in Alaska, Panama, etc.

Naturally, among even those employes who are not under civil service many are experts, or so valuable through long experience with their particular work that they are almost indispensable. The reorganization of the government personnel with a change of party control entails great political responsibility, and interferes for a considerable time with the executive duties of department heads.

FRENCH INCOME TAXES.

American income tax exemptions are extremely high when compared with the French law. No less than 75 per cent of the income tax in France in 1931 was paid on incomes which in this country would be entirely exempt. Every person with an income of 10,000 francs, or $400, is assessed to pay his share towards supporting the government. The total net income of 2,150,000 taxpayers was only $2,500,000,000.

Nearly one-half of the total number paying this tax had incomes of from $400 to $800, while less than 25 per cent of them had incomes in excess of $1,200. Those who admitted having incomes in excess of $2,000 numbered 193,000; 58,000 paid income taxes on more than $4,000; 3,000 on more than $20,000, and 700 on incomes of more than 1,000,000 francs, or $40,000 a year. This "millionaire" class confessed to a total income that averaged 2,000,000 francs, or $80,000.

In the United States the alternative is faced today of broadening the base of income taxes or imposing a small sales tax if the Federal budget is to be balanced. Opposition to both these expedients is too often based on demagogic arguments made for political purposes. There is no valid reason why all Americans, even those with limited incomes, should not contribute in some small measure to the support of their government. Even if incomes three times as large as the French minimum were exempt, the contributions of a few dollars each from the remainder would make a great addition to the returns.

French legislators have concluded that since they have refused to give up any money to the United States it would be unethical to give up any to Austria or anybody else.

Senator Borah proposes a tax on brewers that can not be passed on to the consumer. If this goes through, watch the 5-cent glass shrink.

Greece not only refuses to return borrowed money, but it refuses to return Sam Insull to answer questions about borrowed money.

Jack Garner can call the members together, but he can't make them drink the budget and imagine it's beer.

The biggest job before Congress is to find that $1,000,000,000 that can be saved by just saving it.

Sam Insull will qualify in time as a guide, to show Americans the glories that were Greece.

THE SINS OF AMERICA

From "The Discovery of Europe," by Paul Cohen-Portheim.

The American influence is, I believe, fatal to Europe. American ideals and practices may be right for America—I know nothing of that and it is a problem for Americans. What I do know is that they are the very negation of all that is typically, and in the best sense, European. The most fatal error of present-day Europe is the worship of size, mass, quantity, numbers, which is typically American.

America is the paradise of the capitalist, Russia of the proletarian. And that is why they offer so clear a proof of the ideal common to capitalism and communism. They are closely related, though it is a relationship of hatred; they have grown together and they belong together like light and shadow. When you turn from theory to practice, from Abraham Lincoln to present-day conditions in the United States and from the Marxian manifesto to what is being done in Russia now, you can not but be struck by the extraordinary similarity between the two.

If the Russian effort is worthy of imitation in spite of its mistaken direction, I can find nothing worthy of imitation by Europe in that of the United States. Its influence on Europe has been disastrous; it has given us nothing of value, and has destroyed a great deal. I consider American influence infinitely worse than Russian. Russian claims to world leadership have been listened to, though Russia is poor and life there is hard, because it holds out the promise of a better and juster state of society. American claims to world leadership have been listened to solely because America is rich.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

OLD YEAR.

Calmer minds than ours must pen
What of good you brought to men.
When your time has taken flight
Calmer minds than ours must write
Both the good and ill of you,
Nineteen hundred thirty-two.

Dying now, we turn away,
Thinking thoughts we shouldn't say.
Much too close are we to read
Past our present hour of need
Whether you were friend or foe;
We're not competent to know.

Year of losses, year of grief,
Year which tested our belief,
Year of heartaches, judged today
We are glad you pass away.
This on every hand we hear:
You have been a woeful year.

Still, in time, some calmer mind,
Looking back on you, may find
From the anguish which we knew
Glory and achievement grew;
And, from all the losses, men
Learned the road to peace again.

No Man Ever Won a Fight by Dodging Another's Blows

By ROBERT QUILLEN

UNLESS human nature and natural law have changed, there is a way to whip the depression and save America from further suffering.

Its effectiveness has been known for ages, yet countless men and armies and nations have insured their own defeat by failing to adopt it.

Foch expressed it in six words when he said: "The best defense is an offense."

Failure to remember that axiom cost Auburn's football team the Southern championship for 1932.

Auburn began its last game of the season undefeated and untied. Playing in top form and confident of victory, it gained a lead of two touchdowns and then relaxed. It had the game "on ice." Nothing remained except the business of defending its own goal until the game ended.

But when it quit the offensive, it surrendered the advantage that makes victories. It lost the exaltation of spirit and the exultant frenzy that makes the forward-marching conqueror irresistible. Its spiritual momentum was gone, and its defense crumbled as the opposing team pushed over two touchdowns to tie the score and end the dream of a championship.

The purpose of an offensive is to make gains; the purpose of a defensive is to hold what it has.

In the last national election, the Republican party was whipped before the fight began. Its only hope and purpose was to defend itself. It stood in its tracks and made explanations.

When a man of wealth is tormented by blackmailers, his destruction is certain if his tactics are defensive. He can do nothing but hide and pay. But the moment he takes the offensive and threatens prosecution, his enemies take to their heels.

The depression continues because the attitude of the people is passive and defensive. They tighten their belts and endure. They accept whatever blows may fail. They pay and suffer and hope, and thus they doom themselves to continued defeat.

It takes fight to win. Forty million adults full of fight could force a 50 per cent reduction in taxes in a fortnight. A nation thrilled and exalted by the joy of conflict could make business boom almost overnight.

It is waiting for something to happen that licks us. Fighters win because they make things happen.

POLITICAL COMMENT

Deciding for Next Year.

New York Times.

Not a dollar in the budget on which Congress is now at work will be spent during the remainder of the Hoover administration. Congress is planning now for the fiscal year which begins next July, and its decisions in the next two months will largely determine the financial record of President Roosevelt's first year in office.

It is both unfair and unwise to saddle the new administration with another deficit even before it takes office. It is entitled to start with a clean slate and a balanced budget. But if it is to make such a start, means of reducing expenditures and bolstering receipts should be provided at the present session. Though he is not yet President, Congress is now drafting the fiscal program for Mr. Roosevelt's first year.

Mr. Garner Has Shown the Way.

Kansas City Times.

A complicated situation in the election of a successor to Mr. Garner in the House is reported from Texas. There are a dozen Democratic aspirants for the place to be vacated by the Speaker, which is said in some quarters to improve the chances of a Republican getting in. That could be discounted. But there are difficulties in observing the law with reference to a primary, an election and absentee voters, which seem insurmountable. But there is this shining precedent for guidance: In November, Mr. Garner managed to get elected to two important offices all at once. He was returned to the House and he was chosen Vice President. If Mr. Garner could do all that, having become Speaker previously into the bargain, then one out of a dozen good Democrats ought to find some way to get elected merely to an ordinary House seat from a Texas district.

Closed for the Winter.

Houston Post.

The Associated Press distributes a photograph of a lake steamer, covered with ice, tying up at a Michigan port for the winter. Navigation on the lakes is ended for this winter, it is announced. Several months will elapse before vessels venture from their ports again.

The significance of this news at this particular time is that the United States Senate has before it a treaty negotiated with Canada providing that our Government contribute several hundreds of millions of dollars for deepening the St. Lawrence River and thus constructing a waterway for ocean-going craft from the lakes to the Atlantic. That proposed waterway would be open to traffic for only about two-thirds of each year. During the other third ice would bar navigation.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Outside Producers Would Ruin Farmers Who Voluntarily Curtail Acreage Under Allotment Plan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please permit space for a depressed farmer to state his views upon the so-called "allotment plan" now before Congress for the benefit of agriculture. This "allotment plan" proposes (from a tobacco grower's standpoint) to levy a tax of 4 cents per pound on all tobacco grown in the United States, this tax to be collected when tobacco is sold and afterward paid back to the producers in installments as pro rata with domestic consumption.

All right; we will say I volunteer to the Government to cooperate in this plan and, in order to receive benefits, agree to reduce my acreage 20 per cent on tobacco and, while it is absolutely unthinkable, yet for the sake of argument we will admit that tobacco growers of record would cooperate 100 per cent strong. A child could tell you that a spread of production would occur greater than anything yet known in the industry by outside producers, and at the expense of growers handicapped by a Government pledge and a 4-cent tax at the market, which the manufacturers and consumers are supposed to absorb. But who knows better than the farmer who absorbs our taxes? Besides, what other absorption takes care of the 4-cent tax on our tobacco that goes for foreign consumption?

The whole plan is nothing more than a theoretical idea with no standards of safety and, for one farmer, I am hoping we hear little of it.

E. P. RANSDELL.

Americans Averaged 18¼ Gallons of Beer Per Capita Annually Before Volstead.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post a letter signed "Mechanical Engineer" seems to doubt the arithmetic of Senator Tydings on the subject of the amount of revenue to be expected from the legalization of beer, and points out that over ten gallons of beer per man, woman, and child would have to be consumed annually to make up the estimated revenue. Evidently "Mechanical Engineer" has not delved into statistics to any great extent on this subject.

In one particular year prior to 1917, the annual consumption of beer averaged 21 gallons per man, woman, and child. The average consumption per year prior to 1917 for a 20-year period was eighteen and three-quarters gallons for each man, woman, and child in the country. It is undoubtedly true that quite a few of the babies did not absorb their full quota, but it is undoubtedly a fact that the adult population, which probably included some of the grown-up and sophisticated "babies," absorbed more than their normal quota based on the average. Based on a thirst equal to the average for this 20-year period, it will take 76,000,000 barrels of beer per year to quench this thirst if beer is legalized.

ANOTHER ENGINEER.

Welfare of Philippines Depends on Native Genius and Industry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since the coming of the smiling Mr. Taft to the departure of the charming Pat Hurley, visiting U. S. Senators and others, in the guise of investigators, have been leaders in a continuous rigadoon. Splendid receptions, interesting excursions and pleasing picnics have given them opportunity to look, listen and complicate the problems of 13,000,000 people, striving for a place in the sun.

Forgetful of the experiences of their fathers, the Pilgrims, they insist that the Philippines depart from their homely traditions and join the miserables, slaves of automatic mass production. They point to prosperity in this and other lands, where special privileges, mass production and automatic machinery are making the rich richer and the poor poorer.

It is the duty, and should be the pleasure, of the U. S. A. to extend to the people of the Philippine Islands an early freedom, without allowing capital to dictate terms.

Independence in five years with the free entry of 500,000 tons of sugar and 200,000 tons of coconut oil, the first year, with reductions each following year, sufficient to extinguish all free trade privileges by the time the transfer is made, would force producers to look for other markets, which, by the time independence is granted, would enable a continuation of the present production, or force growers to resort to diversification. Many articles now imported can be produced here. Foreign capital is interested only in established enterprise, in which mass production and especial government protection are guaranteed. Native genius and capital only can be depended upon for the establishment of new industries. GEORGE LANDER.

Sees Chance for Economy by Cutting Down Franking Privileges.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is absurd for Congress to howl about the postoffice deficit when they are responsible for so much of it.

Restrict the franking privilege to official business only, in signed penalty envelopes; do away with the free mail; revoke the franking privilege granted to so many who are well able to pay their own postage; cut down the subsidies and give the postoffice credit for all Government and strictly official free mail, restore the 2-cent postage rate and we will have a different showing. A vast number of people are using postal cards for their correspondence, but would not mind the former postage rate. It is time to cut out free service and silk hat automobiles. A WORKER.

Clarence Moore Weds Miss Joan Lindsley.

Miss Joan Ashton Lindsley, who has been passing the winter with her father, Mr. Halstead Lindsley, at Hewlett, Long Island, was married quietly at 1:30 o'clock yesterday in the chantry of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, New York City, to Mr. Clarence Moore, son of the late Mr. Clarence Moore, who went down on the Titanic, and of Mrs. Akbel C. P. Wichfeld, of this city and 80 Rue de Lille, Paris.

Miss Leonora Lindsley, who is a student at the Fermata School in Aiken, was her sister's only attendant, and Mr. Lloyd Moore served as best man for his brother. The bride wore her traveling dress. The young couple are sailing tonight on the Manhattan to pass their honeymoon abroad and upon their return they will live in this city.

Miss Lindsley, whose mother divides her time between Boston and Lenox, Mass., studied in France and at Battle Abbey, in England. Her mother presented her last winter to society in Boston, where she was elected to the Vincent Club. Later in the season, Mrs. Lindsley took her daughter abroad. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. John Lindsley, who makes her home in Milton, Mass.

Mr. Moore is a grandson of the late Judge William H. Moore, of New York City and Rockmarge Prides Crossing, Mass., and of Mrs. Moore, of 4 East Fifty-fourth street, New York City.

Miss Mildred Tytus, of Washington, served as bridesmaid at the marriage yesterday afternoon in New York City of Miss Beatrice Gawtry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis A. Gawtry, of 8 East Sixty-sixth street and Southdown, Lloyd Harbor, Huntington, Long Island, to Mr. Jose Machado, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Machado, of Ottawa, Ontario. A small reception followed at the Colony Club.

The ceremony that was witnessed only by members of the two families and a few other relatives and close friends, was performed at 4 o'clock in the chantry of St. Thomas Episcopal Church by the rector, the Rev. Dr. Rocliffe H. Brooks. Candles were used as illumination and pale pink combined with greens formed the floral decorations.

Mr. Gawtry gave his daughter in marriage and her only attendants were his sister, Miss Olive Van Rensaalaer Gawtry, and Miss Mildred Tytus. Mr. John Machado served as best man for his brother, and the ushers were Mr. Hamilton Long, Mr. Frederic C. Thomas, Mr. William Richmond, of Providence, R. I., and Mr. Merrill Prentice, a brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

Miss Gawtry wore a gown of pearl-pink satin, cut on simple lines, with cowl neck and long sleeves puffed above the elbow. The long train was formed by the skirt and her veil of chiffon, draped simply over the head, was of the same delicate shade of pink as her gown and her flowers, which were calla lilies were also of the same tint.

The two bridal attendants were in ruby-red chiffon velvet jacket frocks, with toques of the same material trimmed with small veils, and they carried velvet muffs, to which were attached orchids in a deep shade corresponding to their costumes.

Mr. Machado and his bride will make their home in London, England.

A LETTER FROM MILLIE TODAY—IT CAME BY AIR MAIL—ADDRESSED TO NONE OTHER THAN OUR HAPPY, YOUNG LOVER—BIM GUMP—AND THAT ACCOUNTS FOR THE RADIANCE OF BIM'S SMILE—AND AS IS ALWAYS THE CASE—WHEN YOU PLAY ON BIM'S HEART STRINGS—YOU LOOSEN THE STRINGS OF HIS PURSE—12-29
IF THERE IS ANYONE WHO HAS A NOTE COMING DUE OR A DEBT TO PAY—AND WOULD LIKE TO BORROW A FEW THOUSAND—THEY SHOULD SEE BIM TODAY—
TILDA—I WISH YOU WOULD PULL OFF ABOUT HALF OF THIS ROLL—IT'S SO BIG I CAN'T GET IT IN MY POCKET—
CHESTER—YOUR POOR OLD UNCLE IS GETTING VERY TIRED OF CARRYING THIS GREAT BIG ROLL OF BILLS AROUND ALL DAY LONG—I WONDER IF YOU WOULDN'T HELP RELIEVE ME OF THIS BURDEN BY TAKING THIS $20.00 BILL AND PUTTING IT IN YOUR BANK—
OH, THANKS, UNCLE BIM—
ANDY—OLD PAL—THERE ARE TWO ONE HUNDRED DOLLAR BILLS THAT HAVE BEEN STICKING TO MY FINGERS ALL MORNING—WON'T YOU PLEASE PRY ME LOOSE FROM THEM?
THERE IS SOMETHING IN THE AIR—WHEN A MAN ACTS LIKE THAT—WHEN THEY GET GENEROUS THAT WAY AND HAVE THAT AIR OF CONFIDENCE ABOUT THEM AND THAT MERRY LITTLE TWINKLE IN THEIR EYE—YOU CAN'T FOOL ME—THAT MAN IS IN LOVE—

The Light That Failed

WITH THE REFUSALS TO PAY FOR THE PRESENTS COMING IN THICK AND FAST, THE NUMBER OF FAWTHAW'S CHRISTMAS GIFTS ARE GETTING LOWER AND LOWER AND I'LL HAVE TO FIX THIS
THE LIGHTER WON'T LIGHT, WILL IT?? WELL, I WOULDN'T BOTHER WITH IT, IF I WERE YOU!!
YOU'RE GOING TO BREAK THAT CIGAR LIGHTER, IF YOU'RE NOT CAREFUL! DON'T BOTHER TRYING TO FIX IT, FAWTHAW!!
SAY, THIS LIGHTER IS MY CHRISTMAS GIFT!! WHY SHOULDN'T I FIX IT??
BECAUSE UNCLE PAUL JUST SENT BACK YOUR BILL FOR IT, SO WHY WASTE TIME FIXING SOMETHING THAT DOESN'T BELONG TO YOU!!

Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL.

THE first courier to arrive here with a report of Radio City, in New York, was, logically enough, F. P. Guthrie, Washington representative of the Radio Corporation of America. Mr. Guthrie attended the first night performance of the $8,000,000 International Music Hall, the first unit of the $250,000,000 Rockefeller-R.C.A. project to be dedicated.

Mr. Guthrie said the theater was beautiful and of such gigantic proportions and lavishness of furnishings that it had to be seen to gain a proper conception of it. With a seating capacity of 6,200, with 500 performers and with 748 ushers, stage hands and other employes, he said it reminded him of the old New York Hippodrome brought up to date in 1932.

Although the broadcast of the first performance sounded fairly good, as heard in Washington, reports are that the performance was not up to the standard of the house.

"The truth seems to be that Maestro Roxy, the celebrated entrepreneur of Radio City, has opened his caravansary with an uncommonly dull entertainment," writes J. Brooks Atkinson in the New York Times. "It is more the product of a radio-motion picture mind than a genius for the short turns and encores of the music hall."

"That was just the way it struck me," a Washingtonian who had attended the performance remarked. "It appeared to be more of a radio show than a theatrical presentation. A stupendous task is ahead, for they will have to make exceptional efforts to put on entertainment to keep a place of that size filled regularly."

FOR the benefit of radio listeners when a performance is to be broadcast, and also so the performance can be heard in all parts of the house by the huge audience, the stage of the International Music Hall has been equipped with 50 "ribbon" microphones, the new type, which will pick up sound from the front as well as the back. This is the same kind of microphone they are using for the Metropolitan Opera House broadcasts this season.

The second unit of the Radio City—the $6,000,000 RKO-Roxy Theater—will be dedicated tonight. Up to the time of writing, a broadcast direct from the new motion picture house has not been scheduled.

However, an all-star cast under the direction of William S. Rainey will do a radio adaptation of "The Animal Kingdom" (the picture opening the RKO-Roxy Theater), over the WJZ network at 10:30 o'clock.

Milton Aborn's radio version of one of Sigmund Romberg's early operetta successes, "The Blue Paradise," will be the Five Star Theater Show over WJSV at 10 o'clock tonight. "Auf Wiedersehen," "Sparkling Wine" and "Blue Paradise" are all familiar tunes from this operetta.

CAPT. TAYLOR BRANSON and the United States Marine Band will present their Christmas concert during the "Shut-In Hour" over WRC at 11:45 o'clock this morning. Many carols and hymns are included in the program. This network now reaches almost 40 cities.

The story of "Why Adam Sinned" will be told in song with dramatic interpolations by the colored barytone, Jules Bledsoe, as a high spot of Capt. Henry's Show Boat program (WRC, 9:30 p. m.). Lanny Ross will sing "I'll Never Have to Dream Again" and "Some Day We'll Meet Again, Sweetin' Cotton" are among the selections by the Don Voorhees' Band.

IN a radio talk not long ago Frederic William Wile spoke of another "hunger army" which would descend upon Washington with the incoming administration.

"I refer to those who will come here seeking the 92,000 postmasterships which will go to the Democrats at that time," Mr. Wile explained. He thought nothing more of the reference until some time later he received a letter from an insurance man in the State of Washington.

"Are you correct in your assertion that there are 92,000 postmasterships?" the listener wrote. "Knowing you to be invariably accurate I have made a bet that you are."

For the life of him Mr. Wile could not think where he had secured the 92,000 figure, but made haste to check up on it by inquiring of Warren Irving Glover, Second Assistant Postmaster General. To Wile's embarrassment Mr. Glover said there were 51,000 postmasterships.

Whereupon Wile wrote the listener saying that he regretted causing him to lose the bet and added insamuch as he had been responsible for it he felt as if he ought at least to be allowed to share the loss.

Promptly a reply was received from the Westerner:

"O. K. I bet the leading banker here $10 and you can send me your check for $5. You are really lucky to get off with that as the bet was made in the Elks Club, where a $10 limit prevails, otherwise it might have cost you considerable more."

More tall stories, flights into the realm of imagination that only the Modern Baron Munchausen would attempt, will be told in spite of Cliff Hall during the Lucky Strike Dance Hour (WRC, 10 p. m.). Back in the world of reality George Olsen and his orchestra will furnish a program of dance music.

ANNE HARD is stepping right along with her chats on current events (WRC, 9:15 a. m. each week day, excepting Saturday). She is now heard over fifteen stations, in addition to WRC. They are WEAF, New York; WEEI, Boston; WJAR, Providence; WTAM, Cleveland; WMAQ, Chicago; WGY, Schenectady; KSD, St. Louis; WBEN, Buffalo; WOC, Davenport; WCKY, Covington, Ky.; WHO, Des Moines; WOW, Omaha; WDAF, Kansas City; WWJ, Detroit, and WCSH, Portland, Me.

What's more, this network promises to grow!

The film capital will celebrate its New Year's Day with a radio party to be heard over WRC during the Hollywood-on-the-Air program (WRC, 12:30 a. m.). Among the actors and actresses who will participate are James Gleason, Russell Gleason, Lola Lane, Tom Brown, Mae Clark, David Manners, Ralph Morgan, Walter Byron and Gavin Gordon.

The Boswell Sisters—Martha, Connie and Vet—will sing the old lament, "I Ain't Got Nobody," a spiritual, "I'm Grateful, Lawd" and the Southern shoutin' song, "Yassuh" (WJSV, 9 p. m.) in their last program for Chesterfield.

WHEN a N. B. C. dramatic script calls for a hound dog's wail either Ray Kelly or Ed Whitney is invariably pressed into service. Both have reputations as producers of authentic canine howls. When it comes to reproducing the yapping of a small dog, Jolly Bill Steinke seems to hold the edge.

HASTY DISCHARGES DRAW FIRE OF GRID COACHES

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

OUR college football coaches are up in arms against the widespread custom among our universities that has resulted and is still resulting in the dismissal of the coach after one or two losing seasons, if not sooner.

But what is all the shooting about?

It has never been the theory of this department that a college football coach who is fortunate enough to obtain a coaching job should be made a pensioner for the remainder of his days. I have always believed, rather, that the coaching profession was as much a survival of the fittest as any other occupation.

The successful coach usually has no difficulty in holding his job. It is the unsuccessful coach who resorts to the character-building gag who causes the bulk of the turnover in coaches.

McGugin Has Few Fears.

"Uncle Dan" McGugin, of Vanderbilt, newly elected president of the Football Coaches Association, is one member of the fraternity who has few fears for his job.

A few years ago Vanderbilt was not doing so well on the gridiron and a disgruntled alumnus started a movement to oust McGugin as coach, according to the Associated Press. His friends rallied to his support and, discarding the impulse to smite the offending alumnus on the nose, carried the case for the retention of McGugin to the chancellor of the university.

"This is the first time I have heard of the matter," the chancellor told them. "I do not think it will become serious. I assume that Dan wants to continue here. Should those who advocate his removal convince the athletic council they have a sound case and should the council see fit to remove him, I can not interfere. However, gentlemen, the day Dan McGugin is compelled to withdraw, I will abolish football at Vanderbilt University."

Nertney Meets Old Friend.

Nertney on Blue Damsel. That combination which finished third at Jefferson Park yesterday in the fourth race recalls that fateful day at Pimlico November 14, 1931, to be exact, when a spill all but ended Nertney's riding career.

Nertney, then Maryland's leading rider, was astride Blue Damsel on the last Saturday of the Pimlico meeting when horse and rider went down in a jam at the first turn. Roussell, on Sandwrack, also was unhorsed. For days Nertney's life was despaired of, but he rallied from a fractured skull.

The result of the race that day was a treat for numerologists. No. 6 was the prime figure.

The race was No. 66,666 in the Racing Form index.

There were six letters in each name of the winner, Triple Threat.

It was run over a mile and a sixteenth.

There were six letters in the name of J. E. Keyser, the winning owner.

Triple Threat paid $16.50 to win, $7.60 to place and $6.60 to show.

The race was off at 2:26.

Since that spill Nertney has been a victim of the timidity common after such accidents. The story goes that he was sent to New Orleans in an attempt to regain the confidence that had stamped him in Maryland. His mount on Blue Damsel yesterday, the same horse that almost ended his career, may be simply a bold step calculated to restore Nertney's full faith in himself.

Trojans 2 to 1 Favorite to Beat Pitt

Native Sons Betting Even on Victory by 12 Points.

Rival Elevens' Records Fail to Justify Odds Given.

By GEORGE H. BEALE.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 28 (U.P.).—Native sons of the West illustrated their natural optimism tonight by making Southern California an odds-on favorite to defeat Pittsburgh in the Pasadena New Year's Day football game.

Betting commissioners said wagering was 2 to 1, with Southern California on the long end, while even money got Pitt adherents 12 points.

There seemed little to support such figures except local enthusiasm. The records of the two elevens against common rivals gave the Trojans no such edge.

Southern California defeated Stanford, 13 to 0, and Pitt beat the Indians, 7 to 0. Against Notre Dame the Trojans won, 13 to 0, and Pitt won, 12 to 0.

Trojans Unbeaten, Untied In 19 Games.

The Trojans, of course, have gone undefeated and untied in nineteen consecutive games, while Pitt, although unbeaten, was tied twice this season.

Partially balancing the tie that the Panthers picked up on their hard schedule was Southern California's victory over Little Loyola, of Los Angeles, wherein the Trojans, with the aid of a break that gave them the ball inside Loyola's 5-yard line, just managed to win, 6 to 0.

At no time during the year has Southern California developed the powerhouse attack it showed last season in turning in such victories as its 60-to-0 win over Georgia. The best this fall was the 35-to-0 score by which it downed Utah.

In view of the records, the fact that the Trojans failed to roll up large scores against strong opponents and the defensive strength of Pitt, there seemed nothing to justify a two touchdown margin for Southern California.

Trojans Harking Back to Rout of 1930.

The easiest explanation was that Southern Californians still remembered the 47-to-14 walloping the Trojans gave the Panthers in Rose Bowl in 1930.

The Pitt team was loaded with all-Americans that year, but it went completely to pieces

Southern California went through a hard workout here today, with all its regulars in fine shape. Coach Howard Jones indicated he intended to work the Trojans hard again tomorrow and then to allow the work to taper down.

At Tucson, the Pitt team worked out again. Paul Cuba, regular tackle, was favoring a slightly injured leg. The injury was not regarded as serious enough to affect his playing January 2.

Sarazen Golf Choice In Miami Open Play

Miami, Fla., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Gene Sarazen, United States and British open champion, was a heavy favorite as the greatest field of entrants in the history of the annual Miami open golf tournament tuned up at the Miami Springs golf course for Friday's start-off 27-hole play.

The tournament carries a $2,000 purse, and the entry list carried more than 150 names tonight.

Among entrants besides Sarazen, who has won the event three years out of six, are Denny Shute, who last month won the $10,000 Miami Biltmore open; Billy Burke, Walter Hagen, Tommy Armour, who won the event last year; Joe Turnesa, winner in 1930, and Ed Dudley.

Plans for the tournament call for eighteen holes of play Friday and another eighteen Saturday. The low 64 professionals and ties and the low 15 amateurs and ties will qualify for final 36-hole play on Sunday.

Sharkey's Blast Called "Baloney"

Schmeling Would Fight Champ Any Time, but Not at Garden.

New York, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, today issued an answering blast to that yesterday of Jack Sharkey, heavyweight champion, in which he said Schmeling would be glad to meet Sharkey any time, but not under the promotion of Madison Square Garden, to which Sharkey is tied by contract.

Sharkey, who won the title from Schmeling last summer, said the German was afraid to meet him again, to which Jacobs, in several hundred words, answered "baloney."

"There was no chance to make the match with Sharkey," Jacobs said, "on account of being necessary to box under the promotion of Madison Square Garden, which I absolutely refuse to do."

Jacobs has signed Schmeling to meet Max Baer, of Livermore, Calif., next June under the promotion of Jack Dempsey. Dempsey yesterday wired Sharkey an offer to meet the winner in September, after Sharkey's contract with the Garden has expired, but the offer was declined.

STETZ FACES GOODMAN IN MAIN BOUT

JOEY GOODMAN, well-known junior welterweight boxer, who recently returned to his native heath in Richmond, Va., after a successful nine-month invasion of the Pacific Coast, will make his debut at Portner's Arena in Alexandria Tuesday night.

Matchmaker Frankie Mann yesterday negotiated successfully with Pete Moran, Philadelphia promoter, for a match between Tony Stetz, knockout artist from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and the 22-year-old Virginia scrapper. They will meet in the eight-round feature bout of the program that will bring Roy ("Kid") Manley, Arkansas southpaw belter, and Buster Brown, of Baltimore, into action in the eight-round semiwindup.

While Goodman has never fought in this section he is well known by fistic followers through his adventures in rings throughout the country. Ranked sixth last year in the junior welterweight and lightweight divisions, the fast-stepping little Hebrew puncher has had a colorful boxing career. He has been fighting since 1926.

A few years ago Ike Dorgan took him under his management, and Goodman won six straight fights at Madison Square Garden. Later he came under the wing of Jimmy Dunn, Cleveland promoter and one-time manager of Johnny Kilbane, former welterweight champion. Kilbane was Goodman's chief trainer. Under Dunn, the Virginian fought two world's champions, Sammy Mandell and Benny Bass, losing to both when they were at their peak. Goodman went out to the coast last January and hung up a string of ten victories.

Stetz, a southpaw, fought Arthur DeBeve at Portner's a few weeks ago, losing by a foul in the sixth. He was leading the fight until DeBeve claimed a low blow. Stetz won 14 straight fights by knockouts.

Two other sixes will be arranged on the card.

Hecht Advances In Junior Tennis

Freedman Is Lone Seeded Player to Bow in Two Championships.

New York, Dec. 28 (U.P.).—All but one seeded star advanced to the third round in the national junior and boys indoor tennis championships here today.

He was Daniel Freedman, New York, seeded No. 6, who was defeated by Bernard Marcus, Cornell, 6—1, 8—6.

Marco Hecht, Penn, seeded No. 1, had an easy time defeating Julius Rosen, Columbia, 6—1, 6—2.

Other results involving seeded players follow: Richard G. Hebard, Hill School, defeated James Jacobson, N. Y. U., 6—0, 6—1; Giles Verstraten, Kelvin School, defeated Charles Swanson, New York, 6—1, 6—3; Bernard Friedman, U. of North Carolina, defeated Doublas C. Mook, Dartmouth, 6—2, 6—1; John Nogrady, New York, defeated Morgan J. Pembrooke, New York, 6—2, 6—1; Willard E. Ingalls, jr., Harvard, defeated Sidney Weinstein, New York, 6—3, 7—5.

Alfred Jarvis, Hackley School, defeated Frank Hutson, New York, 6—3, 6—4; Charles Mattman, New York, defeated Philip H. Steckler, New York, 6—3, 7—9, 7—5; Lyman Crossman, Burnash School, defeated Andre J. Mendel, New York, 6—3, 10—8, and Carl G. Nesbitt, McBurney School, defeated Irving Kram, New York, 8—6, 6—4.

Lon Warneke Led National Pitchers

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

THROUGHOUT the entire 1932 National League season, teammates and opponents alike were singing the praises of Pitcher Lon Warneke, of the Cubs. This flashy young right-hander, hailing from the wilds of Arkansas, showed class from the first day the season started until the end and the official averages for the year, released yesterday morning, show him not only leading the pack in effective and in winning percentages, but also credited with the most victories, 22, and in a three-way tie with Steve Swetonic, of the Pittsburgh Pirates and Jerry (Dizzy) Dean, of the St. Louis Cardinals, for the most shutout games, four apiece.

Warneke went through the season with an average of but 2.37 earned runs scored against him each nine-inning game. In this respect, the National League flingers proved to be much more effective than those in the American. Southpaw Carl Hubbell, of the Giants, was second to Warneke in effectiveness (2.50), with Huck Betts, Boston's veteran rookie, third (2.80) and Swetonic fourth (2.84).

Swetonic Second To Warneke.

In wins and losses, Warneke boasted a healthy .786 average, the result of 22 victories and 6 defeats, with Swetonic second, with 11 victories and 6 losses. Guy Bush, Chicago, rated third, winning 19 games and dropping 11.

One league record was broken and another tied, the new mark being made by that great old-timer, John Pincas Quinn, now with Brooklyn. He finished the most games, 31, bettering the 29-total credited Lloyd Davies, of the Giants, in 1926, and a similar effort by himself in 1931. Wild Bill Hallahan lived up to his nickname in equaling the record for the most wild pitches in one inning, cutting loose with three in the twelfth frame of a game with the Dodgers on May 11. Jake Weimer, of the Cubs, set this unwanted mark with the Cubs away back in 1903.

Charlie (Red) Lucas, of the Reds, pitched the most complete games, 28, leading in this respect for the second year in a row. He, with Fred Frankhouse, of the Braves, and Waite Hoyt, of the Dodgers, allowed the most sacrifices, 20.

"Dizzy" Dean Proves Strikeout King.

Larry French, of the Pirates, took part in the most games, 47, and allowed the most hits, 301. Dizzy Dean, of St. Louis, toiled in 46 games, to win the title of strike-out king, having 191 victims, while he pitched the most innings and faced the greatest number of batsmen.

Among the season's feats of wildness were 113 bases on balls by Van Mungo, of the Dodgers; 9 wild pitches by Paul Derringer, of the Cards, who also was scored on the most times, 133; and 9 hit batsmen by Owen Carroll, late of the Reds, but now a Cardinal. Carroll also suffered the most defeats, 19.

From the opposite angle, Bill Swift, of Pittsburgh, walked but 26 in 214 frames, while Betts passed but 35 in 222 innings, and Lucas only 37 in 269 rounds.

Getz, of Chicago, Seeks Schmeling-Baer Bout

Chicago, Dec. 28 (U.P.).—George Getz, Chicago sportsman, plans a trip East next week to try to persuade Jack Dempsey to bring the Max Schmeling-Max Baer heavyweight boxing here next summer.

Getz will meet World's Fair officials tomorrow, with the idea of enlisting their cooperation in presenting arguments to Dempsey. Dempsey has signed Schmeling and Baer for the bout, but has not chosen the scene of the scrap.

Chicago, Dec. 28 (U.P.).—Fidel La Barba, featherweight from California, today was rated a 7-to-5 favorite over Tommy Paul, feather champ in National Boxing Association territory, for their ten-round bout at the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night.

Paul's title is not at stake. La Barba already holds a decision over Paul. The Californian recently lost a disputed verdict to Kid Chocolate, titleholder in New York.

Maxie Rosenbloom, playboy owner of No. 1 rating, tangles with a formidable rival, Billy Jones, Philadelphia Negro. They have met twice, each winning a decision. Rosenbloom, now ranked as champion in New York and at the top of the N. B. A. rating, has titular ideas.

Bob Olin, New York, and Martin Levandowski, Grand Rapids, a couple of hard-hitting light-heavies, meet at ten rounds. Jackie Sharkey, Minneapolis, and Fred Miller Cincinnati, round out the card with an eight-rounder.

3-TIME U. S. NET CHAMP SUICIDE

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Suffering from a nervous collapse, Malcolm D. Whitman, thrice national tennis singles champion, jumped to his death today from the roof of his East Sixty-seventh street apartment. He was 55 years old.

Whitman, identified prominently for years with the eastern textile industry, had been under the care of physicians and two nurses for the last week. His wife, Mrs. Lucilla Whitman, was in a nearby room when Whitman brushed aside the nurses, climbed up a parapet to the roof and jumped.

In 1898, 1899 and 1900, Whitman—fresh from college championships at Harvard—won the national singles championship. In 1898, he won out over Dwight F. Davis, former Secretary of War and donor of the Davis Cup.

Defaulted to Larned.

In 1901, Whitman defaulted and allowed William Larned to win. The next year, Whitman came back, finishing as runner-up. In 1900, he was a member of the first Davis Cup Team.

After entering into the business established by his father, the William Whitman Co., of Boston, the former champion maintained his interest in tennis and, at the time of his death, was an honorary member of the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association.

Beside his vice presidency in the William Whitman Co., he was a member of the textile firm of Lasher & Whitman and a director in half a dozen other companies.

Early this year, Whitman's history of tennis, "Tennis Origins and Mysteries," was published.

The widow, Whitman's third wife, was a former concert singer, daughter of the late Pietro de Vescovi, University of Rome scientist.

Whitman's suicide recalled that two of his tennis contemporaries also have taken their own lives.

Raymond D. Little, of Princeton, intercollegiate champion and later doubles champion of the country with Gustave Touchard, shot and killed himself in his Park avenue home July 29.

Larned, who was seven times national singles champion, shot and killed himself on December 16, 1926, while suffering from paralysis.

Married Coast Heiress.

Whitman's first wife, formerly Miss Janet McCook, died. Then he married Jennie Crocker, San Francisco heiress, whose fortune is estimated at $10,000,000. That wedding followed upon what was described by his acquaintances as a whirlwind courtship. The wedding gifts alone reputedly were insured for $1,000,000.

When they went on their honeymoon, the bride an authority on pedigreed dogs, took along her 65 blooded canines in a private car attached to their special train.

In 1925 they were divorced through proceedings in Paris. The following year she married Robert B. Henderson, president of the Pacific Portland Cement Co., almost at the same time that Whitman was marrying Mme. de Vescovi.

Root Named Grid Coach At Yale

Former Eli Lineman, Succeeds Stevens; Walsh Retained.

Qualified for Position After Experience of 7 Years.

In naming the 29-year-old Root to the post which Stevens resigned ten days ago, the Yale Athletic Association adhered to its traditional policy of having an Eli alumnus as head of its gridiron squad.

Root, substitute tackle on the elevens of 1924 and 1925 and head freshman coach last season, was one of seven men named on the varsity and junior varsity staffs for 1933. All of the appointments are for one year.

Walsh Reappointed Line Coach.

Adam Walsh, captain of the famous "four horsemen" eleven of Notre Dame in 1924, was reappointed line coach, a post he has held four years. Charles A. Comerford, end coach, a post he has held since the war, will continue in the same capacity, while Paul A. ("Bucky") O'Connor, another former Notre Dame player, is promoted from junior varsity back field coach, to the same position on the varsity staff.

The junior varsity staff will consist of Raymond W. ("Ducky") Pond, head coach; Arthur E. Palmer, jr., line coach, and Stewart P. Scott, end coach.

With the exception of Walsh and O'Connor, all of the appointees are Yale graduates.

Although Yale has adopted the policy of naming the captain of its eleven on the coaching staff for the ensuing year, the name of Capt. Johnny Wilbur was not included in the list of appointments. No mention was made either in the official announcement of Albie Booth, who was named an assistant coach on the 1932 staff after leading the eleven the previous year.

The freshman staff, however, has still to be chosen. Officials said its personnel will not be announced until late next month.

Root, one of the best lacrosse players ever turned out by Yale, will bring to his new job seven years of coaching experience, which began immediately after his graduation in 1926.

Introduced Football Into Mexico.

A native of Leroy, N. Y., Root is credited with introducing the American style of football in Mexico. He was head coach of the National University of Mexico, in Mexico City, in 1929 and 1930. Previously he was Freshman line coach at Yale, and head coach at Roxbury and Taft schools.

He has been varsity lacrosse coach during the past four years. The post has been given to him again for 1933, but Yale officials did not indicate whether he will give up his lacrosse duties in view of his new appointment.

Lucy Fowle Is Upset In Girls' Title Net Play

Brookline, Mass., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Lucy Fowle, of Winchester, second seeded player in the girls' national indoor tennis tournament, was eliminated in the quarter-finals today by an unseeded player, Louise Harding, of Brookline. Miss Harding won, 4—6, 7—5, 6—4.

The other quarter-final match played brought victory to Helen Jones, of Swampscott, third seeded player, over Marian Wood, of Brookline, 6—1, 0—6, 8—6.

In two second-round matches Virginia Hollinger, of Dayton, Ohio, and Helen Grawn, of Detroit, were victors. Miss Hollinger defeated Constance Curtis, of Belmont, 6—2, 6—1, while Miss Grawn eliminated Kay Parrott, of Winchester, 6—1, 6—2.

Miss Grawn and Rosemary Kerrison, of England, were defeated by the Greater Boston team of Sylvia Hatch and Miss Parrott in a doubles match, 3—6, 6—4, 6—2.

Fight Body to Probe Gastanaga's "Illness"

New York, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Isadore Gastanaga, Spanish heavyweight, today informed Madison Square Garden he had fallen a victim of influenza and would be unable to go through with his scheduled 10-round bout with Tom Heeney, of New Zealand, Friday night.

At the request of the garden Dr. Alexander Schiff, representing the State Athletic Commission, examined Gastanaga and reported he found nothing wrong with him. The big Spaniard insisted he was sick, however, and said he would not go through with the fight. The matter will be presented to the commission tomorrow and in the meantime the garden started a hunt for a substitute.

MICHIGAN BOY WINNER.

New York, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Robert Moore, of Grand Rapids, Mich., defending title holder, won the opening game in the national junior pocket billiard championship tournament here today when he defeated John Wright, Brooklyn city champ, 75 to 36, in 17 innings. Moore had a high run of 14 to a 12 for Wright.

WEST DENIES ADVANTAGE IN WEIGHT

East's All-Star Team Challenged to Weigh In by Hollingbery.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—A pre-game challenge to compare poundage at an official weighing-in enlivened the practice programs of the football stars who will meet in the annual charity game here January 2.

Since the rival squads established training camps, the East at Stanford University, and the West at the University of California, Berkeley, the impression has gained that the Western forces would hold a man-for-man weight advantage of some 11 pounds.

Orin Hollingbery, co-coach with Dana Bible, of the West, took note of the weight question today with the statement:

"This talk of the West having such a great weight advantage strikes me as a lot of psychological maneuvering on the part of Coaches Andy Kerr and Dick Hanley. If they are willing we will get all the boys together and weigh them. I doubt if there would be much difference between the two squads.

"The matter is only incidental, anyway. We wouldn't care if the Eastern players weighed a ton apiece."

Practice for the East was considerably lighter than yesterday, when five players — Hortsmann, Purdue full back; Gil Berry, Illinois half back; Pug Rentner, Northwestern half back, and Joe Hill, Colgate guard—were banged up a bit in scrimmage. A running attack was stressed. Berry's passing stood out. Coach Hanley says the Eastern line shapes up a bit weak.

The two-a-day workout program of the West was concluded with scrimmage this afternoon. One session will be held tomorrow. The Westerners have been given twenty plays and these will be worked over for the balance of the training period.

Miss Fishwick Plans U. S. Golf Invasion

New York, Dec. 28 (U.P.).—Miss Diana Fishwick, one of Great Britain's leading golfers, will sail for the United States late next month to compete in the major tournaments to be held in Florida this winter, according to a cablegram received here today.

The message, bearing the entry of Miss Fishwick for three championship competitions on the Florida east coast—at St. Augustine, Ormond and Palm Beach—was received by Ray McCarthy, director of the tournaments at these resorts.

It also said that Miss Fishwick would participate in the national women's championship for the first time to be played next August at the Exmoor Country Club in Chicago.

Mentors Seek To Stabiiize Profession

McGugin, New Head of Body, Says Jobs Too Precarious.

By JACK CUDDY.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 (U.P.).—The American Football Coaches Association will campaign to prevent hasty "firing" of college grid pilots merely because they have suffered one or two losing seasons, the association's new president, Dan McGugin, of Vanderbilt, announced today.

McGugin pointed out in his acceptance address that the increasing tendency toward quick-action discharge of coaches has made teaching football one of the most precarious of all professions, and that the situation should be stabilized.

The 52-year-old Vanderbilt mentor showed no qualms about taking over the presidency, the "Jonah job" of football. Five men who occupied the chair before him have resigned their coaching positions while serving as president. Dr. Mal Stevens, of Yale, who turned over the gavel to McGugin today, was the last to resign.

Dismissal of Coaches Biggest Problem.

Many of the 350 coaches from all sections, attending today's last session of the annual two-day meeting, told McGugin in private conversations that the firing of coaches was the association's biggest problem.

Chet Wynne, of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, digressed from his scheduled talk on a defense against the Warner system of play, to appeal in open meeting for some action against "sending a man out in September to lead a college squad, and firing him six weeks later, without due provocation."

W. H. Cowell, of New Hampshire University, continued automatically in office as the association's secretary-treasurer. Dana Bible, of Nebraska, was elected first vice president, and R. W. Bierman, of Minnesota, second vice president.

Coaches to Develop Own Rules Body.

Most of the meeting was devoted to discussions of various types of kicking and different methods of football defense. However, the coaches made a progressive step in voting to establish their own football rules committee, which will send delegates to the National Collegiate Athletic Association's football rules committee with suggestions for changes that the coaches may desire. These delegates will not have voting power on the N. C. A. A. committee.

Lou Little of Columbia was appointed chairman of the new rules committee, which is composed of fifteen college coaches and five high-school coaches.

The association voted to hold its next annual meeting at Chicago, if the N. C. A. A. decided to hold its convention there. The N. C. A. A. is understood to be planning to do this.

Contract Keeps Hagen, Sarazen From Coast

New York, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Gene Sarazen, British and American open golf champion, today messaged the Associated Press from Coral Gables, Fla., that the reason he and Walter Hagen had failed to enter the Los Angeles open golf tournament was because they were prevented by a Florida contract from going West at that time.

"Have received clippings," Sarazen wired, "intimating all sorts of wild rumors explaining failure of myself and Hagen to file entries for Los Angeles open. Would appreciate your quoting me to effect contract with club (Miami Biltmore) prevents us from going to Coast."

DURVA RIDDEN OUT TO WIN JEFFERSON PARK FEATURE

Stop Gap Up To Take Place

May Have Won but for Getting in Worst Going in Stretch.

Country Tom, Field, Wins Third, Paying $59.40 for $2.

JEFFERSON PARK, New Orleans, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Horses which kept to the narrow, firm path on the inside accounted for most of the gold and glory here this afternoon. The track was deep and heavy and very slow time was in order.

The Lone Star Stable's filly, Durva, now at the top of her form, was ridden out to score by a length over Stop Gap in the featured Hotel Bienville purse, a test of a mile and 70 yards. Grimace was beaten 6 lengths for the place award.

Durva, favorite at $4.40 for $2, completed the journey in 1:56 3-5.

Stop Gap Stopped by Heavy Footing.

It is not improbable that Stop Gap would have won had he not been taken to the middle of the track, where the footing was so bad while the gelding was making his bid in the stretch. J. Neel wisely kept Durva well into the rail. The latter had the foot of the field and was sent into a long early lead. In the final furlong the filly was under pressure while holding Stop Gap safe to the end. Grimace forced most of the pace, but faltered in the final drive.

Johnny Gilbert picked right up where he left off in last night's closing race, winning the opening contest astride the speedy gelding Overboard, which paid $13.40. The Kansas kid outsmarted his rivals, keeping the winner on a narrow firm path right next to the inside rail at the same time saving ground. The veteran sprinter opened up a commanding lead and although tiring at the end held Dr. Parrish's closing rush in check. Judge Dixon always was well up. This was Gilbert's 210th winner.

District Court League Will Meet Tonight

Officers will be elected, a schedule drafted, and rules adopted at an important meeting tonight at the Central Y. M. C. A. of the newly organized District of Columbia Amateur Basketball League. The meeting will start at 8 o'clock and will be presided over by Ralph Foster, physical director, elected temporary chairman last week.

Present plans call for the opening of league hostilities the first week in January, with twelve strong unlimited teams wheeling into action.

Managers of teams representing the Colonials, Red Sox, Hyattsville National Guard, Saranac A. C., Y. M. C. A., Boys Club, Shade Shop, Takoma Business Men, Rockville A. C., Kensington A. C., Delaware & Hudson and Jewish Community Center.

BLUE COALS CONQUER.

Griffith Blue Coals won their tenth straight after a tough uphill battle last night with the Crescent A. C. The score was 22 to 14. At the turn the Crescents led, 10 to 9, but steady team work and passing plus the deadly shooting of Tom Peck enabled the Blue Coals to coast home the victors.

Central, Eastern Choices In School Title Court Race

Coach Kelley's Hopes Hinge Largely on Showing of Davis at Center; Central Is Given Slight Edge.

ALREADY installed as the favorite in the approaching high school title chase, Central looks with anxious eyes in the direction of Lincoln Park, where Coach Mike Kelley is grooming Eastern for what promises to be one of the hottest flag scrambles in many winters. On paper Eastern rates next to Central, but opinion is divided in this respect. Some fans think Kelley's charges will win the crown, others think it will wind up third.

The school sorely misses Barney Kane, its mere wisp of a forward, one of the most colorful performers in the series in recent years; Bernie Lieb, giant center; "Bones" Courtney, forward, and Ben Zola and Dallas Shirley, a pair of clever and dependable guards, who graduated. It required the final game of the last round for this combination to clinch the championship last season, but they were fighters and what is ordinarily referred to as a "money" team.

Much Depends on Davis.

Should Tom Davis pull the unexpected and fit in with the machine at center, Eastern is going to cause trouble. A rookie and a football player, Davis has found it difficult to adjust himself to the court game. To his credit it must be said he is a worker, and is rapidly improving. There are times when Davis looms as one of the best. He handles himself well on block plays and is no slouch at popping the ball through the basket.

Tom Nolan, Jack Bayliss, Al Waters and Joe Perruso will complete a formidable team if they get working together. The boys are smart and fast on their feet, but none will bring home any prizes in scoring. Eastern's reserves are just as speedy as the first team, and Kelley may find the key to his problem in ten boys who can literally run the opposition to death.

Eastern, though it is undefeated, has yet to flash championship form. Faced with a tough foe the team plays its best brand of ball, but when the opposition weakens there is a tendency to loaf.

Series, as a Whole, Promising.

On the whole, the series is expected to furnish an abundance of excitement and color and competition should be keen, but best of all will be the private feud between Eastern and Central.

Not since "Cy" Hogarth, Julie Radice, Angus Heekie, Elliott and McAllister, of Eastern, matched wares and wits with Earle Moser, Mickey McDonald, Bill Banta, Warren Swift and Forrest Burgess, has the titular chase provided such a healthy rivalry.

AT THE POST

with Bill Bennings

DEAR AL: JEFFERSON PARK, DEC. 28.

Well, pal, I kept up my average today with two winners—Durva and Bonnie Cap. In fact, it's been more than two weeks since I have had less than two winners. Johnny Gilbert and I are beginning to like the place. The only difference is that Johnny, with the 1932 record stowed away, is likely to leave Sunday for a well-deserved rest, while old Bill is forced to stick around. After a duck dinner, I grabbed the trusty dope book and I believe I located a few paying propositions. These I'm passing along. BILL.

FIRST RACE—PIECEMEAL gets in light and with Hank Mills due to ride appears to have the edge on the gang named for this mile and a sixteenth jaunt. THE BREAK appears to be the one to cause the most trouble despite top weight. This may be the spot the SINGING KID crew has been awaiting.

—SECOND RACE—BEGUILE'S outing here was a sizzler and I see no law against this one making it two in a row. Will like the going but must beat VONNIE. UFORME won impressively for me the other day and appears to have a lock on part of the money.

THIRD RACE—ABE FURST has the early speed necessary to overcome the disadvantage of having the rail position on a slow track and I would not be surprised to see him take the purse. ALAMAE and BILL ORANGE for the rest.

FOURTH RACE—VOLWOOD is moving up and I'm stringing along. That 115 pounds probably will include Johnny Gilbert. Both horse and rider are in rare form. OTTIE M. tried to run all over the track the last time and doubtlessly will be straightened out today. Strictly the one to beat. DORIS B. appears best of the others.

FIFTH RACE—If SANDWRACK tosses this one away, I'm going back to duck hunting. This fellow goes slumming in this company with 104 pounds up. ALLEGRETTO has been winning for me consistently. CHENE for the show.

SIXTH RACE—YANKAWAY has been threatening to take a distance race and tomorrow tries a hand at sprinting. This I believe is the right assignment. We shall see. AILEEN C. and FLIRTING should complete the money picture.

SEVENTH RACE—This race has a Gilbert angle that's hard to pass up. The 1932 riding champion has been piloting several in this field, but I'm inclined to believe he'll choose JACK BIENER and ring up another winning mount. PACHECO and DIXIE LAD will battle for the place.

TECH BEATEN BY ALUMNI TOSSERS

Daly, Billings Star for Varsity in 39-27 Defeat.

TECH'S Alumni, a brilliant array of court talent, defeated the varsity by a score of 39 to 27 in a fast, rough game yesterday in their annual battle. The victory gives the old-timers a one-game edge in the last five, or since Artie Boyd assumed control of the basketers at the T-street school.

A large crowd (mostly relatives of the players) was on hand to cheer and jeer its favorites. Fresh fruit imitations were plentiful.

Daly, Billings Star For Varsity.

Carroll Daly, Tech's red-headed center, and Johnny Billings, a lean lad, put together in a manner similar to the Empire State Building, shone for the current Maroon and Gray team. Together they scored twenty of the undergrads' points.

With Joe Crosson, Bozie Berger, Monk McCartee, Chalky Councilor, Bill Werber and other shining lights in past history in the line-up, the Alumni found the varsity easy pickings. A spurt in the last period clinched the decision.

Hyattsville High Bows To Alumni Five, 38-32

The Hyattsville High five bowed to the alumni team yesterday, 38 to 32, in a game that saw a small army of players used by both teams. Cohan, Kidwell and Evans did the bulk of the scoring for the winners. However, Burdette Cogar was the individual star, scoring 17 points for the varsity.

Stocks Fail in Attempts To Recover Recent Loss

New York, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—By way of variety, the stock market tried a rally today, but was not particularly successful in its attempt.

By closing time, early gains running up to a couple of points had either been well pared or completely lost and a few stocks had experienced considerable selling pressure.

Stocks started uncertainly, but support for New York Central, which jumped 2 points, brought rails into speculative prominence and buying extended to other groups. By noon, however, the market began to tire and prices thereafter sagged gradually. Weakness of General Motors discouraged professionals interested in the rise, for that industrial leader was actively offered and lost a major fraction. DuPont weakened in sympathy.

Steel shares had a late sinking spell, though their losses were relatively small. U. S. Steel's net decline was ⅝, but the preferred was up a point. Allied Chemical, Case, Western Union, American Telephone, Corn Products, Westinghouse and a number of rails were among the stocks to finish either fractionally or about a point higher. New York Central halved its extreme rise. Total transfers were 1,581,261 shares, the largest in six weeks.

Undoubtedly the market was relieved of some of its tax selling burden, but offerings for this purpose still seemed to be trickling in and may have accounted partially for the selective weakness evident here and there. Brokers are noting that while a number of stocks are flirting with their year's highs, others are approaching the 1932 minimums, attributing the latter movement not only to income tax liquidation but also the assumed prospect of further readjustments such as dividend casualties or capital changes.

FOREIGN MARKETS.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading on the stock exchange was quiet after the holiday with most interest centered around South African gold shares, which ruled pending definite developments regarding the currency question. Home rails advanced on favorable traffic prospects and gilt-edged securities and German bonds also hardened. The closing was quiet.

Paris—Prices on the bourse were irregular owing to profit taking. Trading was limited and the closing was barely steady.

Canada-Russia Plans For Barter Denounced

London, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Plans for barter arrangements between Canada and Soviet Russia, reported to be under way, were denounced by the Liberal Free Trade Manchester Guardian today.

The Guardian says it is anxious to see if Prime Minister R. B. Bennett of the Dominion approves the project. And if he does the Guardian wants to know "what becomes of the arguments he has been using to persuade the British government to veto its timber agreement with Russia."

BONDS STAGE RALLY IN STRONG MARKETS

Two-Tenths Gain Is Added on Heavier Sales List of $16,108,000.

New York, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Rallies in the bond market today were a couple of laps ahead of declines in the most active trading since August 24.

Sales totaled $16,108,000, par value, against $10,290,000 yesterday. The sharply increased aggregate was due principally to unusually heavy turnovers in some of the United States Government, railway and foreign issues. The Associated Press-Standard Statistics average for 60 domestic corporate loans advanced two-tenths of a point.

Gains ranging from 1 to 3 or more points were held by some liens of Santa Fe, Atlantic Coast Line, Baltimore & Ohio, the Canadians, Chesapeake Corporation, Rock Island, Erie, Hudson & Manhattan and Illinois Central.

Equally drastic losses were suffered by some bonds of Boston & Maine, Burlington, Chicago, Indiana & Louisville and Great Northern.

Several of the Federal Treasury obligations reached new highs for the year, but the Liberties sagged. Liberty fourth 4¼s were the heaviest traded at a loss of 6-32 point.

The best grade utilities and industrials maintained their steady positions. United Drug 5s were up 2 points in transactions involving 128 bonds.

German loans were strong, several new 1932 highs being recorded in this group with gains ranging from fractions to 4 or more points.

Canada Is Seeking to Win Trade Beyond Dominions

Ottawa, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Spurred on by the stagnation of world commerce Canada is searching for wider markets for its products. Trade agreements with various dominions of the British empire were concluded at the Ottawa imperial conference and are in operation. Attention is now being given to foreign countries.

C. H. Cahan, secretary of state, has been in Paris for several weeks negotiating a trade treaty with that country, to replace the one revoked several months ago. Canada and Germany will enter a temporary trading agreement at the first of the year, to be replaced later by a permanent treaty. Negotiations were carried on some time ago with Argentina, but no basis for a treaty was reached. Agreements with other South American countries are contemplated.

In an indirect way Ottawa is interested in proposals to establish a barter system between Canada and Soviet Russia. Unofficial negotiations have been conducted to exchange Canadian cattle for Soviet oil. Canada has a list of prohibited Russian imports and the negotiations for increased trade with the Soviet are outside that list.

CURB TRENDS MIXED IN HEAVIER TRADING

Year-End Influences Prevail as Turnover Mounts to 320,000 Shares.

New York, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Price trends were again confused in a broad and active market in the curb exchange today.

Year-end influences again predominated, as scores of ordinarily inactive issues were traded, either in selling to establish losses for tax purposes, or in transactions to fix year-end values for security inventories. The total turnover approximated 320,000 shares, the largest since October 5. The number of issues traded was the largest in months.

Among the more prominent issues in this market, net gains predominated, although final prices were in the main somewhat under the day's best. In the utilities, Electric Bond & Share gained a point and American Gas & Electric 1⅜, but these were cut to fractions at the finish.

Changes in the oil group were narrow. Gulf rose ½, then lost its gain. Similarly, a fractional advance by Standard of Indiana was mostly lost in the later dealings.

Mining issues were also mostly firm, such issues as Newmont, Roan Antelope and Teck Hughes.

Stocks.

Attempts to stage rallies failed, and stocks closed one-tenth of a point lower. The sales volume climbed to 1,581,261 shares.

Bonds.

Advances marked trading. Gains of two-tenths were recorded, and the turnover soared to $16,108,000.

Curb.

Trends were mixed. Price changes remained narrow. Sales mounted to 320,000 shares.

Wheat.

Grain prices throughout the world recovered. Wheat closed unchanged to ⅜ of a cent higher. December sold at 43 to 43⅛ cents.

Cotton.

Small offerings and trade buying resulted in 5 to 7 points gain. March sold at 5.95. Liverpool reported a quiet market.

WHEAT VALUES GAIN THROUGHOUT WORLD

Closing Prices Unchanged to 318 Higher; Corn and Oats Advance.

Chicago, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—In a quick recoil from new record low prices, grain markets the world over rescued themselves today from effects of Argentine and Canadian distress selling.

Evidence that United States grain growers were withholding supplies to an unprecedented extent did much to bring about price rallies. Receipts of wheat at chief domestic centers were shown to have been curtailed today to the smallest total this season, and arrivals of corn in Chicago were almost nil.

Before the price rallies, however, urgent pressure of Argentine wheat for an outlet in Europe swept the Liverpool market down to a fresh historic depth for quotations on wheat future deliveries in Great Britain, with Chicago May and July wheat contracts likewise reaching an all-time record low. Simultaneously, May and July corn, May oats and July rye in Chicago outdid season bottom records.

Wheat Slightly Higher.

Wheat closed nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜ higher; corn, unchanged to ⅜ up; oats, ⅛ off to ⅛ advance, and provisions varying from 2 cents' decline to an equal gain.

Contributing momentum to the late upward swing of wheat values in Chicago were purchases here against sales at Minneapolis and Winnipeg. An increase of general speculative buying in Chicago was also a stimulating factor.

A decrease of 4,988,000 bushels shown in the world's wheat visible supply was also a help to recuperative power.

Corn and oats paralleled the action of wheat. Eastern demand for corn was fairly good.

Provisions were steadied by grains.

COTTON PRICES RISE ON TRADE'S BUYING

March Closes at 5.95, as General Market Gains 5 to 7 Points.

New York, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Reflecting relatively small offerings, cotton was steady today on trade buying for domestic and foreign account.

Heavy rains in portions of the Central and Eastern belts, retarding the crop movement, were said to have checked selling pressure from local and Southern sources. Otherwise the market was without feature, with traders generally marking time in the between-holiday period. March contracts sold up from 5.89 to 5.99 and closed at 5.95, with the general market closing steady at net advance of 5 to 7 points.

The opening was unchanged to an advance of 3 points on a fair demand from the trade, Liverpool, the continent and spot houses.

Some Liquidation Reported.

Some January liquidation was reported in the early trading, carrying that position down to 5.76, or a point below the previous close. However, when pressure failed to increase from other sources, and the trade absorbed offerings, early sellers in attempting to rebuy caused prices to rally to net gains of 9 to 11 points.

Partial reactions from the best occurred in the late trading under liquidation promoted by the late reaction in the stock market.

Liverpool cables reported a quiet market, but with a steady undertone on trade calling, while the Manchester cloth market was quiet and featureless. Export. today 33,252, making 4,030,957 so far this season. Port receipts, 67,049. U. S. port stocks, 4,880,143.

NEW YORK.

SUGAR—Raw was quiet early today and prices were unchanged at 2.79 for spots. The only sale reported was one concluded late yesterday of 18,000 bags of Philippines due January 5 to an outport refiner at 2.79.

Futures opened unchanged to 1 point lower and showed further declines of 3 point on most positions which carried prices into new low ground for the season, January, opening at 68, sold off to .64, while September reacted from .85 to .84. Prices at midday were 1 to 2 points net nower.

Selling came principally from houses with trade connections and was believed to represent hedging against new crop duty frees or tired long liquidation. Reports of growing agitation against the Chadbourne plan in Cuba may also have had an unsettling effect, although the decline appeared to be due more to the poor spot demand and increasing new crop offerings.

Refined was unchanged at 4.15 for fine granulated with a fair hand-to-mouth inquiry reported.

COFFEE—Spot, quiet; Rio No. 7, 8¼; Santos No. 4, 9¾@10. Rio futures closed easy; sales, 3,000 bags. March, *5.77; May, *5.49; July, *5.27; September, *5.07; December, *5.03. Santos futures easy; sales, 14,000 bags. March, 6.42; May, 7.87; July, *7.66; September, 7.48; December, *7.38.

REPUBLICANS REPLY TO ROBINSON CHARGE

Snell and Treadway Say Democrats Lack Team Play and Program.

(Associated Press.)

Two leading House Republicans, stirred by the charge of Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, that the G. O. P. was blocking the Democratic program, struck back yesterday with assertions that the victors of last November's election had no program to offer the country.

Representative Snell, Republican leader of the House, said "the truth of the matter is that the Democrats haven't a program and never have had any besides beer by Christmas."

Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, high ranking on the Republican side of the House ways and means committee, in a statement said that Robinson, the Senate Democratic leader, was "quite facetious" in endeavoring to throw blame for the prospect of a special session next spring or summer on the Republicans.

"No Team Play."

"The Democrats are marching up the hill and marching down again," he said, "their wires are crossed and there is no team play."

Both maintained that the Democrats have control now of both branches of Congress. Treadway said:

"The Democratic party controls the House and with its coalition vote also controls the Senate. In what way, therefore, can it be said that the Republican party is today defeating legislation? Since the night of November 8 it has been known that the next administration will be Democratic. Has any announcement come either through the President-elect or the Democratic leaders of Congress of any fixed program which that party has in prospect?

Praise Hoover Policy.

"President Hoover has shown his good offices in endeavoring to cooperate with President-elect Roosevelt in the question of international debts, but his efforts toward cooperation have been declined. The Democratic leaders of the Senate have announced that under no circumstances will any nominations of the present administration be confirmed. This attitude has cost the Government the expert services of such a man as Charles R. Crisp, of Georgia, on the U. S. Tariff Commission and undoubtedly other nonpartisan appointments. This enormous Democratic political appetite for everything possible from elevator boys at the Capitol, to international arbiters makes for crippling the efficiency of the Government and continued delay."

Legislator Pawns Gift Suit Until Pay Begins

Seattle, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Another call was made today upon Democratic leaders who gave $250 last week to outfit and transport to the State capital, Olympia, eleven of King County's newly elected legislators who, unemployed, were without funds.

The five party chiefs who contributed the money were informed today a member of the group had pawned a new suit to get subsistence until his pay starts in January. They forgave him.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

FOR 20 years Baldassare Forestierre, of Fresno, Calif., has tunneled under his 10-acre farm until now, after moving 28,000,000 pounds of earth, he has a subterranean farm on which grow oranges, lemons, grapes and grapefruit. In his hand-made maze of underground caves he has 63 rooms averaging 15 feet square and eight feet high—more than 14,000 feet of floor space under the ground.

His caves may be entered by automobile, through a driveway 15 feet wide and 660 feet long. The various parts of his underground farm are connected by a mile and a half of corridor three feet wide and six feet high. He has labored 42,000 hours with a pick and shovel in his caves, according to a conservative estimate—or 210,000 horsepower hours, based on the amount of work done. Figured at electrical power costs of 1 cent per horsepower hour, his labor would have been worth $2,100.

Error Made in Liquor Raid Address Yesterday

It was erroneously stated in yesterday morning's Post that Third Precinct policemen seized a quantity of alleged liquor in a raid Tuesday night at 1865 California street northwest. The address should have been 1860 California street northwest. The man arrested in connection with the raid, Lawrence Alexander, 28, gave 1865 California street northwest as his address. The police report inadvertently gave the man's address as the scene of the raid. The report was later corrected on the precinct books by police who failed to notify newspapers of the change.

The Post regrets the error.

Singers Will Visit Several Hospitals

"Songlands Romance" to Be Presented by Stars Tonight.

The minstrel operetta, "Songlands Romance," replete with radio and stage stars well known here—for the last three years a Christmas feature at local Government hospitals—will be presented tonight at St. Elizabeths Hospital, followed by appearances in order at Mount Alto and Naval Hospitals, Soldiers' Home, Elks Club and other places of performance to be arranged.

In two parts, the operetta has been cast with a view toward placing before the public old and new stars, together with dancing acts and ballets outstanding in their field in the profession. The cast is headed by Edwin Steffe, Henry Nestor, Robert Cushman and James F. Nolan, winners of the Atwater Kent 1932 audition.

POTOMAC AND CREEK SWOLLEN BY RAINS; MOTORIST STRANDED

Steady rain descending on the greater Washington area throughout yesterday converted the Potomac River and Rock Creek into angry torrents, marooning a motorist in the creek, and helped farmers forget recent droughts.

The rain, when calculated on the measuring rod, didn't amount to a great deal. The precipitation from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. yesterday was .77 inches. For the 24-hour period up to 8 p. m. it was 1.28 inches. What counted, the Weather Bureau officials pointed out, was the steadiness of descent.

The rain will take a holiday today and return tomorrow afternoon or night, according to the forecast. Cloudiness and warmer weather is predicted for today.

Nears Top of Seawall.

The Potomac River and Rock Creek were the best examples of the durability of the rainfall. The river at Highway Bridge had risen to 15 feet. It was but 8 inches from the top of the seawall at Hains Point last night.

Sight of the swirling creek made "Do Not Cross" signs unnecessary for most motorists. One, however, a young woman, attempted to cross the creek at Blagden avenue. The ignition of her car was flooded before she got halfway across and she was marooned in the center.

Climbing on the rear seat, the young woman, who later gave her name as Frances Hand, 20, of 1331 Gallatin street northwest, shouted for help. A passing motorist put in a fire alarm. The fire truck arrived, but the firemen found the floodmore of a problem than a fire of equal dimensions. Support of the Eighth precinct was enlisted and a patrol wagon was sent to the scene. But police, too, found the situation more baffling than a fleeing hold-up man. They tried the Park police, and these guardians of parks and buildings saved the day.

7.06 Inches Above Normal.

But not alone. They recruited a refuse truck and a chain, and pulled Miss Hand and her car to safety.

Miss Hand looked from firemen to policemen and from policemen to park policemen. Then she inquired in a naive way:

"You aren't going to arrest me, are you?"

She wasn't.

Yesterday's rain gave a decided boost to the precipitation for December. Since December 1 the excess over the normal rainfall has amounted to .73 inches. The rainfall for the entire year has been 7.06 inches above normal. August was the driest month with 1.36 inches. The total precipitation for the year was 47.58 inches.

The heavy rains have restored drought-stricken farms in the Washington area to normalcy, according to Joseph B. Kincer, of the climate and crop division of the Weather Bureau.

Arrested Driver Taken to Hospital

Believed to be suffering from an overdose of a sleeping potion, Eugene Rose, 27, 227 Twelfth place northwest, was transferred to Gallinger Hospital late yesterday following his arrest in Fairfax County, Va., for unauthorized use of an automobile.

He was arrested by Charles B. Bullock, State motor inspector, and Capt. Heywood J. Durrer, Fairfax County policeman, after a chase of several miles.

It was learned he was driving a car belonging to O. R. Zircle, 1224 Chapin street northwest, which had been reported stolen from the rear of 21 Pierce street northwest.

RAIN ADDS TO FALLS' BEAUTY

The usually picturesque and gently rolling Pierce Mill Falls in Rock Creek Park were transformed into a roaring, churning mass yesterday after two days' rain, with little Rock Creek swelling its banks.

FEDERAL FEDERATION APPROVES BANQUET

Mrs. Pedigo Will Preside at Meeting Today to Perfect Plans.

Indorsement of the banquet to be given January 11 to the national executive committee of the Federation of Federal Employes was voted last night at the regular meeting of the Department of Agriculture branch of the federation.

It was announced that tonight a meeting would be held of the banquet committee at 7:30 o'clock at No. 915, The Conard, under the direction of Mrs. Rebeka Pedigo, chairman. At this meeting arrangements will be made for the details of the banquet.

The committee members are Miss Minnie D. Stevens, Bureau of Engraving and Printing; R. Benner, Navy Yard; William Sanger, Commerce; Mrs. Ola G. King, Treasury; M. G. Lloyd, Bureau of Standards; George E. Lavally, Tuberculosis Hospital; Charles Kothe, Adjutant General's Office, and E. I. Snyder, Navy Department.

John W. Ginder, president, and William Sanger, secretary, of the District Federation, will attend the meeting and outline the purpose of the banquet.

Pressure Breaks Glass; Man Opening Door Cut

That it is best to use the knob in opening a door, Tellman Henson, 27, of 104 Indiana avenue northwest, learned yesterday to his sorrow.

In his haste he placed pressure on the glass in the front door of his home. The glass broke and his wrist was deeply lacerated, necessitating an ambulance call and treatment at Emergency Hospital.

Mission Children Feted at Party.

Children from the Gospel Mission were entertained by residents of the Elizabeth Somers Home of the Y. W. C. A. at a Christmas party last night. Miss Lida Johnson, chairman of the girls' committee, was in charge of the program. The youngsters were taken to the home in buses.

ATTORNEY REFUSES DATA COURT SEEKS

Preferring to "stand on the record," Jesse C. Duke, attorney, yesterday flatly declined to supply the District Court of Appeals with a statement of facts, supported by affidavits, to bolster the charges he has made against United States Attorney Leo A. Rover and Justice F. D. Letts, of the District Supreme Court.

Mr. Duke charged last summer that the bill of exceptions in a criminal appeal in which he was interested had been sent to the Court of Appeals by Justice Letts and Mr. Rover with "false, inaccurate, incomplete, deleted and diluted" facts. He has also sought the impeachment of both men in the House of Representatives.

After perusing Mr. Duke's charges, the Court of Appeals last week invited him to substantiate his charges by filing, yesterday, additional facts with affidavits. This Mr. Duke declined to do, although he asked the court to modify its invitation in two minor respects.

The matter now rests with the justices of the Court of Appeals, who have indicated that "disciplinary action" might be taken against the attorney if the transcript of the case did not bear out his allegations. The transcript has been in the Court of Appeals for some time, and its contents have been digested. The appellate court convenes next week.

Wilson Is Honored At Cathedral Rite

The birthday anniversary of Woodrow Wilson, wartime President, was commemorated in prayer yesterday during the afternoon service at Bethlehem Chapel, Washington Cathedral. The Rev. W. L. DeVries, canon preceptor at the Cathedral, officiated.

Several memorial wreaths were placed on the Wilson tomb in the Cathedral crypt. Lieut. Campbell D. Hodges, military aid to President Hoover, placed one in the name of the Chief Executive. Among other wreaths placed were ones from the Woodrow Wilson Foundations of Washington and New York.

Wife Saves Man Felled By Motor Gas in Auto

Nelson, Skogland, 24, of 433 Second street northeast, was overcome by carbon monoxide gas while sitting in a car parked in front of his home late yesterday.

He was found unconscious by his wife, Dorothy, and with the help of members of her family he was taken into the house. The Fire Rescue Squad and Emergency Hospital ambulance responded to the call, and he was brought back to consciousness.

Tree at Settlement House.

Children of the Christ Child Settlement will be guests at a Christmas party to be given at 11 o'clock this morning at the new Settlement House, 808 Massachusetts avenue northeast. An immense tree is being prepared and there will be presents for every child attending.

"Be Careful!"

Noted Barytone Speaker at National Banquet of Music Teachers.

The dawn of a "golden age in literature" is looming, declared Geoffrey O'Hara, noted American barytone, in addressing the Music Teachers National Association last night at their annual banquet.

The poor lyricist, declared Mr. O'Hara, hitherto has not existed, but a future pregnant with roseate probabilities was envisioned by the distinguished singer last night for the unsung creator of song words.

Since 1900, said Mr. O'Hara, a renaissance in world and American poetry has been on the horizon.

"Things are going to be new under the sun," he said, "though the old saying belies this."

Composers were not neglected by Mr. O'Hara, who related several humorous anecdotes wherein lyricists were paradoxically credited with the composition of great songs. Of interest among these he told of Francis Scott Key's writing the words of "The Star-Spangled Banner," the air of which had been composed long before by John Sanford Smith.

Menu Musical, Too.

The banqueters were also addressed by William J. Cooper, Federal commissioner of education, who stressed the value of "music in the curriculum." Each course of the menu was given a musical term. A number of other noted music authorities and musicians spoke, sang and gave renditions on their instruments.

Hans Kindler, leader of the National Symphony Orchestra, was scheduled to address the banqueters on "Some Experiences in Orchestras." Somewhat indisposed, he was present but did not talk.

Grand opera "is not a diamond horseshoe affair," but an art which should be patronized by all the people, Herbert Witherspoon, noted basso and director of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, declared yesterday afternoon before the second day session of the music teachers at the Washington Hotel.

Walter Kramer Talks.

Reviewing grand opera and its current problems, Mr. Witherspoon outlined a vision of the ultimate combination of the orchestra and opera with one company covering a dozen or so cities, with an orchestra in each community.

A. Walter Kramer, editor of Musical America, followed Mr. Witherspoon, and discussed the "so-called musical public."

500 Convention Delegates Hear Symphony Tonight

Approximately 500 members and delegates attending the convention of the National Music Teachers' Association tonight will be the guests of the National Symphony Orchestra at its concert at 8:30 o'clock in Constitutional Hall. Holders of tickets to the regular Sunday series of concerts also will be admitted to their regular seats.

Prominent among out-of-town delegates is Deems Taylor, famous American composer of the opera "Peter Ibbetson," which made its debut two years ago at the Metropolitan. Mr. Taylor, who will occupy a box tonight, will hear his "Thru the Looking-glass," conducted for the first time in Washington by Dr. Kindler.

London College of Music Session to Be Held Here

The annual meeting of the chairmen of committees of the Trinity College of Music, London, will be held today in the Washington Hotel.

Those present will include Dr. Becket Gibbs, chairman of the United States committee; Dr. W. F. G. Swann, of the Philadelphia committee; Dean John P. Marshall, of the Boston committee; Dr. Royal D. Hughes, of the Columbus committee, and Miss Fiona McCleary, organizing secretary.

Danes Hold Christmas Party.

A characteristic Danish Christmas party was held last night by the Danish Society at the downtown center of the Y. W. C. A., 614 E street northwest. A Danish Christmas tree, hung with Danish ornaments, was the center feature of the scheme of decoration. Henry Bockdorff and Alfred Kliesner were in charge of the decorations.

BUILDINGS DEMOLISHED

TEACHERS APPLAUD MUSIC AT LIBRARY

Delegates to the convention of the Music Teachers National Association yesterday afternoon heard a very interesting program of chamber music presented in their honor by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Chamber Music Auditorium of the Library of Congress.

The artists were the Gordon String Quartet—Jacques Gordon, first violin; Ralph Silverman, second violin; Paul Robyn, viola, and Naoum Benditzky, 'cello—and Harold Bauer, pianist.

Mr. Gordon and Mr. Bauer particularly pleased with their spirited and delicate handling of "Triptych, for Violin and Piano," by Carl Engel, head of the music division of the Library of Congress. Mr. Gordon's tone was clear and warm and his technique excellent.

Daniel Gregory Mason's "String Quartet on Negro Themes," was the first selection by the quartet. Its three movements were played with feeling and understanding. Two interesting Indian sketches of Charles T. Griffes were greatly appreciated by the audience.

Concert by 2 Women Pleases Throng at Hotel

The first in the series of three concerts given by the Musical Artists of America drew a large and appreciative audience at the Willard Hotel yesterday when Mary Briggs, violinist, and Gladys Stevenson, pianist, shared honors.

Miss Stevenson opened the program with Caesar Franck's "Prelude, Choral et Fugue." She played with delicacy and beautiful technique, especially in the pianissimo passages.

She followed with a Chopin group, but it was her final number, the Liszt transcription of the Paganini "Caprice" that she did her best work. It was an astounding achievement—perfect in rhythm and vigor. As an encore she played Brahms' "Lullaby."

Miss Briggs' first rendition, "Scotch Fantasia," by Bruch, seemed to lack the fire and romanticism which characterizes the music. Because of the damp weather she had difficulty with her strings.

A pure warm tone with keen understanding was apparent when she played Dehnanyi's "Ruralia." Her interpretation of Lili Boulanger's lovely "Nocturne" showed Miss Briggs to be a real artist. She gave a brilliant display of bowing and clever fingering.

WET STREETS SEEN BANNING 400 HACKS

Rains Make Safety Tests Ordered Before January 1 Impossible.

Wet streets may prevent 400 taxicabs from operating on January 1.

Under the regulations no taxicab tags are issued until inspectors pass upon the brakes, headlights and mechanical condition. In order to make brake tests, dry pavements are necessary.

Traffic Director William A. Duzer said last night that it is unlikely that there will be any extension of time after January 1.

"The applications were mailed to taxicab drivers early in November. They have had plenty of time to file them."

Rain for the last two days has put the streets in such condition that tests according to regulations are impossible.

Cases of Influenza Increase in Capital

Health Officer Says Mild Type Makes Situation Not Alarming.

A marked increase in the number of cases of mild influenza here was noted yesterday by William C. Fowler, health officer, whose records show 179 cases this month, as compared with 7 for the same number of days in December, 1931.

The situation is in no way alarming, Dr. Fowler said, because the influenza is of a very mild form, and its victims are usually well again within a few days. During the last week, 92 cases of influenza were reported, while only three were recorded during the corresponding week of last year.

So far this month, there have been 11 deaths reported from influenza and 67 from pneumonia, compared with 6 last December from influenza and 61 from pneumonia.

ARCTIC EXPLORERS FOOLED BY MIRAGE, SPEAKER DECLARES

Geographers Told Freakish Visibility Has Caused False Discoveries.

Maligned explorers of the polar regions undoubtedly were victims of freakish visibility conditions, in a great many cases, members of the Association of American Geographers were told yesterday in a paper prepared by William H. Hobbs, of the University of Wisconsin, and read by Stanley Dodge, of the University of Michigan.

The paper, in reviewing famous exploration expeditions, offered the opinion that many explorers who have received world-wide criticism for claiming discovery of lands already charted were probably deceived by mirages and the extraordinary visibility of the Arctic and Antarctic regions.

Mr. Hobbs presented the conclusion that only through explorations undertaken by airplane and other modern equipment, such as was used in the Byrd expeditions, will a determination be reached of just what land has been uncharted.

Morning and afternoon sessions of the geographers, which marked the opening of the twenty-ninth annual meeting of the association at the Shoreham Hotel, constituted a journey on a magic carpet to many countries.

Geodetic Survey Status.

W. H. Bradley, pilot on a voyage on the Green River across the Uinta Range of Utah, delivered a paper on his findings. William S. Cooper, professor of botany at the University of Minnesota, traced the post-glacial history of the Mississippi River. W. M. Davis, gave a description of Clear Lake, Calif.

The status of the Geodetic Survey was discussed by William Bowie, of that Federal service, in a lecture supplemented with lantern slides. The natural land use areas of the United States were described by C. P. Barnes, of the Department of Agriculture. Gold, tin and copper mines of South America were brought within the vision of the geographers through an illustrated lecture by Robert S. Platt, of the University of Chicago. The American petroleum industry was reviewed by John W. Frey, of the Geological Survey.

Matthes New President.

Rural settlement farms of Japan were described by Robert Burnett Hall, of the University of Pennsylvania, while oyster culture in the Auray River of Brittany was depicted by S. P. Poole, of Syracuse, N. Y.

Other papers given were on the technique of the quantative study of erosion and some early results of the study, by H. H. Bennett, of this city, and the work of the committee on glaciers of the American Geophysical Union by Francois E. Matthes, of the Geological Survey.

Mr. Matthes was elected president of the association, succeeding O. E. Baker, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. S. S. Fisher, of the University of Indiana, was elected vice president; Mr. Platt, treasurer. Frank E. Williams, of the University of Pennsylvania, was reelected secretary and Prof. Ralph Brown, of the University of Minnesota, was chosen as a new councilor.

Memorial Papers Read.

Memorial papers were read for six members who died in the last year. They were Albert Perry Brigham, of Colgate University; J. Paul Goode, of the University of Chicago; Ellen Churchhill Semple, of Clark University; Henry G. Bryant, of Philadelphia, past presidents of the society, and William Gardner Reed, formerly of the Weather Bureau, and Frederick Jackson Turner, noted historian, of Wisconsin and Harvard Universities.

The members were guests last night of the National Geographic Society at the home of the society on Sixteenth street. The twenty-ninth annual dinner of the association will be held tonight with Mr. Baker as the principal speaker. The meeting will close tomorrow.
